U.S., Britain Sign Pact to Trade Cotton And Rubber

By William V. Neely.

The United States and Great Britain yesterday announced the first recorded international exchange of commodities for war reserve stocks.

This country will thus dispose of 600,000 bales of its price-depressing cotton surplus and will receive in return about 175,000,000 pounds of British rubber with which to bolster its defenses.

For seven years the exchanged stocks will be held off the market, for use only in case of a "major war emergency."

Value of the cotton and rubber to be exchanged is placed roughly at from $26,000,000 to $30,000,000 each.

Deliveries will be made within a six-month period, with the merchant marines of the two countries sharing equally in the transportation.

Exchange, Not a Barter

Successful conclusion of the negotiations, marked by what was praised on Capitol Hill as "good trading for America," was expected to open the way for other deals by which the United States can dispose of more of its surplus cotton and wheat stocks for tin and other critical war materials not produced here.

Dr. Herbert Feis, the State Department's adviser on international economic affairs, disclosed that the United States is conducting preliminary negotiations with Belgium for the same sort of exchange. However, negotiations with the Netherlands have been discontinued because of lack of interest on the part of the Hague government.

Terming the agreement an "exchange," as distinguished from "barter" in the sense generally accepted since Germany's trade expansion program was inaugurated, officials said the deal could not be classed as barter, since it lifted the products out of and above the commercial trade channels and the rules and facilities that ordinarily apply, and locks up the stocks until a war comes.

Kennedy, Stanley Sign

The agreement, signed in London by Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, for the United States, and Oliver Stanley, president of the British Board of Trade, will be sent to the Senate in the form of a treaty, subject to Senate ratification.

Enabling legislation also will be required to authorize the Commodity Credit Corporation to obtain title to the cotton, on which Government loans already have been made, to take over the rubber in exchange and handle other details of the deal.

Likewise, the International Rubber Control Committee, on which Great Britain and The Netherlands are the chief powers, will be required to authorize the increased export of British rubber. Little difficulty is expected in obtaining that approval.

While it had been hoped that 1,000,000 bales of the 11,500,000 bales on which the United States has made loans to growers might be disposed of in the deal, it was explained that Britain declined to take more than the 600,000 bales at present.

Byrnes Initiates Plan

The transaction developed from a resolution sponsored by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina. Byrnes, discussing advantages of the plan yesterday, said this country's rubber supply now is only about 100,000 tons, due chiefly to controlled production, while the average stock has been 300,000 tons.

Four Congressmen Will Fly To Europe Today on Clipper

EARLY CHAVEZ CANNON MAPES

Stephen Early Also Will Help Blaze Pan-American's 'Lindbergh Route' to Southampton; 2 Trips Planned Each Week

By International News Service.

A dozen high Government officials will take off from New York today on the Yankee Clipper for the first scheduled United States-England passenger flight over the "great circle" route.

Stephen T. Early, secretary to President Roosevelt, and four members of Congress—Senators Ernest Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, and Dennis Chavez (Democrat), of New Mexico, and Representatives Carl E. Mapes (Republican), of Michigan, and Clarence Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri—will make the first official flight over the northern route, via Nova Scotia, Newfoundland and Ireland.

Other Government officials scheduled to board the Pan-American 41-ton flying boat at Port Washington, Long Island, at 7:30 a. m. are Gen. D. C. Emmons, commandant at Langley Field, Va.; Edward P. Warner, member of the Civil Aeronautics Authority; Clinton M. Hester, CAA administrator; Richard S. Boutelle, director of the CAA division of air regulations; William S. McDuffee, executive office, Air Safety Board; Charles P. Gradwick, superintendent of the Air Mail Division, United States Postoffice Department, and R. Walton Moore, counselor of the State Department.

Blazing the trail for establishment of regular U. S.-European air service over the route Col. Charles A. Lindbergh followed on his epochal flight a decade ago, the Pan-American clipper will make three stops, however, between New York and Southampton, England, whereas Col. Lindbergh made none between New York and Paris.

Military Assistance Is Pledged in Pact With France

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 23.—France ceded a part of her mandate in Syria—the Republic of Hatay—to Turkey and signed a mutual military assistance pact with the Turkish government in twin ceremonies at Ankara and Paris today.

Georges Bonnet, the French foreign minister, in a statement issued at the demand of Syrian nationalists affirmed that France had no intention of relinquishing her mandatory obligations in the rest of Syria and Lebanon.

The assistance agreement signed in Paris by Bonnet and Suad Davaz, the Turkish ambassador, is a seven-point document forecasting continuing negotiations for a "definite accord of long duration" with a pledge that, meanwhile:

"In case of an act of aggression which might lead to a war in the

King Reports 'Some Success' in Mission Abroad

London, June 23 (AP).—King George reported formally today on his regal job of selling Great Britain in the United States and Canada by modestly asserting that he and Queen Elizabeth had "in some sort succeeded" in their mission.

His deepest impression of the 15,000-mile North American trip, he told 700 guests at a state luncheon in the City of London's ancient Guild Hall, was "that even in this age of machines and mass production the strength of human feeling still is the most potent of all forces affecting world affairs."

He said he hoped the tour might "be of some importance in its influence on the empire's future destiny."

Fierce Battle Reported on Mongol Border

400 Tanks, 200 Planes In Japanese Clash, Moscow Is Told

Moscow (Saturday), June 24 (INS). Reports reached Moscow early today telling of large-scale land and air hostilities between Soviet-sponsored Outer Mongolian forces and Japanese-Manchukuo troops and planes.

The fighting, causing many casualties, has been raging intermittently for a week, having begun last Saturday, June 17, according to these reports.

(A Japanese army communique at Hsinking, Manchukuo, claimed 49 Soviet warplanes were shot down and five Japanese lost in a huge air battle Thursday, culminating a series of Russian air raids on Manchukuo centers.)

Numerous clashes were reported at several points along the frontier between Outer Mongolia and the Japanese puppet state of Manchukuo. At least 400 tanks and more than 200 planes were said to be in action.

Soviet diplomatic circles said they had received no official confirmation of the Far Eastern fighting which apparently is quickly mounting to a Russo-Japanese crisis comparable to the one engendered last August by the gigantic battle near Lake Khassan (Changkufeng) at the conjunction of the borders of Siberia, Manchukuo and Korea.

Although Moscow's foreign circles expected the customary exchange of accusations between Russia and Japan, each charging the other with "invasion," there was a tendency to connect the new hostilities with the negotiations now going on between Britain and the Soviet Union for completion of the European anti-aggression front.

In some quarters the opinion was hazarded that the border difficulties may have been launched in an effort to divert Russia's attention from Europe and thereby balk the projected Anglo-French-Soviet alliance.

Boy, 14, and Girl, 11, Drown As Hundreds Flee Heat Here

Two children were drowned in the District area yesterday on the eve of promised relief from blistering heat which drove hundreds to ponds and waterways.

RITA

Rita Friend, 11, of Grand avenue, Capitol View, Md., was drowned in Rock Creek near Jones Mill road in Montgomery County, while wading with two girl companions.

Montgomery County Policeman E. R. Jones said one of the girls, Winnie Proctor, 13, of Capitol View, told him they were wading along the shore when Rita stepped into a deep hole. She was found in 8 feet of water and was pronounced dead by Dr. B. C. Perry, of Bethesda.

Elliott Grimes, 14, of the 1800 block of Capitol avenue northeast, was drowned while playing on a raft in a pond at the United Clay Products Co. plant, Bladensburg road and New York avenue northeast. Police said two companions, William Jamison, 13, and Francis Davis, 12, watched from the bank when Elliott overturned the flimsy craft of boards and sank without a sound.

Dry air from the northwest came down on Washington during the day, sending the humidity back to normal, while the Weather Bureau reported a peak temperature of 84 at 3:50 p. m. Fair weather, with temperatures about the same as the last 24 hours, was forecast for today.

Britain Asks Showdown At Tientsin

Tokyo Told Insults Must Be Ended or Retaliation Will Be Considered

Orders to Move

JAPANESE HAVE ordered the Standard Oil Co. and the British Asiatic Petroleum Co. to relinquish tanks and offices at points along the North China Railroad. At the same time, it was officially announced, that Japan had lifted the sea blockade at Swatow. At Tientsin Japanese continue to undress and search British subjects despite a stiff protest filed by the British consul. Page 5.

Soviet Deal Speeded

By International News Service.

London, June 23.—Great Britain tonight took a long step toward a quick showdown with Japan on the Tientsin blockade issue and simultaneously applied added pressure to speed the entry of Soviet Russia, Japan's greatest rival, into the Anglo-French defensive camp.

Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax summoned and interviewed in swift succession the Japanese Ambassador, Mamoru Shigemitsu, and the Soviet Ambassador, Ivan M. Maisky.

To the Japanese Ambassador Lord Halifax delivered a pointed demand that Japan cease at once the heaping of what Prime Minister Chamberlain described in the House of Commons earlier in the day as "intolerable insults" on British residents at Tientsin, where the Japanese army has imposed a blockade on the Anglo-French concession area.

Quick Answer Demanded

The foreign secretary coupled this demand with a stiff warning that the British government would consider retaliatory steps against Japan if a reply from Tokyo, satisfying Britain, is not received within a reasonably short time.

Moreover, Halifax asked Shigemitsu to inform the Tokyo government that Japan would be held responsible for any loss or damage to British property in China and that the present Japanese tactics will not cause Britain to deviate from her Far Eastern policy.

[Lord Halifax was said to have received a rapid-fire sequence of the Tientsin outrages based on reports received by the foreign office in the last 24 hours and including, in addition to the Tientsin incidents, the action of Japanese soldiers in other China cities, the United Press said.

Indignities Must End

[Shigemitsu promised to transmit the protest to Tokyo immediately and said he still was unable to answer Britain's previous formal note asking whether Japan is prepared to settle the Tientsin trouble as a local incident.—Editor's Note.]

Arsonists Visit Fireworks Plants, And Welkin Rings

By International News Service.

Chicago, June 23.—The earth rocked in Chicago's western suburbs today with the force of a blast detonated when three arsonists kidnaped a watchman and touched off $30,000 worth of fireworks stored in the Acme Fireworks Corporation warehouse in Proviso Township.

The explosion aroused residents within a radius of 10 miles.

For nearly an hour after the first blast the air about the plant was filled with shrieking skyrockets and pinwheels, as well as exploding torpedoes and crackers. The sheet metal warehouse was demolished.

In nearby Leyden Township a second fireworks plant was saturated with gasoline by arsonists who fled before touching it off. Both plants are owned by Harry Cohen, of Chicago, who said a price war may have been responsible for the plot.

King Zog Plans New York Visit

New York, June 23 (INS).—Exiled King Zog of Albania, the tiny mountainous nation recently annexed by Italy, plans a visit here with his American-Hungarian Queen Geraldine and their baby son, Crown Prince Skander. They are expected to arrive within a few weeks from their temporary refuge in Greece.

The information was brought to Ben Marden's Riviera on the Palisades across the George Washington Bridge by the Baroness Suzanne De Strasser, who recently visited the once-royal couple.

Extension Offered on 64c Silver

Fiscal Affairs

THE SENATE Appropriations sub-committee tentatively decided to restore to WPA the $125,000,000 of its funds earmarked for PWA, and to eliminate the relief bill provision for a three-man administrative board. Page 2.

CONGRESSIONAL action on the tax revision bill was completed as the House accepted Senate amendments. Page 2.

Monetary Pledge

Seeking to break through a silver-bloc filibuster that is delaying badly needed legislation in the Senate, the Administration last night offered to extend for six months its current price of 64.64 cents an ounce for domestically mined silver.

The offer was announced by Senate Majority Leader Barkley after a White House conference but the immediate response of the bloc from silver-producing States was not favorable for a settlement.

Although Senators have repeatedly asserted they would hold out for a price of at least 77 cents, it was thought in some quarters last night that public announcement of the Treasury promise not to cut the purchase price below its present level might be sufficient to appease a portion of the silver bloc and weaken the filibuster that has held up legislation to extend the President's monetary powers.

However, Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, a leader of the bloc, said he was "not interested" in the offer. Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, said he had "never heard of it," and added that, "as far as I'm concerned, that price is no offer at all."

McCarran Stands Firm

The President's monetary powers expire Friday night, and a combination of silverites and inflationists has been attempting to force the Administration to guarantee a Treasury price for silver ranging from 77½ cents to $1.27. The current world price is 42¾ cents.

At his press conference yesterday, the President warned that if the monetary bill—continuing executive powers to devalue the dollar, to manage the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund and to purchase domestic silver—is blocked through June 30, he will immediately ask for legislation renewing the powers.

But McCarran expressed determination yesterday to obtain a price of 79 cents or better before any other legislation is enacted. He indicated that even the all-important relief bill, continuing the WPA, may not halt the silver debate when

250 N. Y. Pupils Ill After Eating Free Lunches

St. George, Staten Island, N. Y., June 23 (INS).—More than 250 children from 41 schools throughout Staten Island, and an undetermined number of adults, were stricken with food poisoning this afternoon after eating free public school lunches.

The schools from which cases were reported were in Tottenville, New Dorp, Grant City, Port Richmond, Travis and West New Brighton.

Within a short time after the first case had been reported, hospitals were swamped by a deluge of emergency calls from the schools, asking that the increasing numbers of suffering children be given immediate attention.

While police, department of education and health department probes started at once into the sudden illness of the children, it was unofficially reported that the offending food had been Spanish rice pudding, which was on the lunch menu at all the affected schools.

Germany Masses Troops for Drills

Paris, June 23 (U.P.).—Extensive troop movements extending from the Saar Basin to the Franco-Swiss frontier in preparation for Germany's summer maneuvers were reported here today.

Troop concentrations were noticed especially between Trier and Saarbuck and in the regions opposite the great French fortifications at Bitche and Wissembourg. It was reported that six German line divisions will participate in the Rhineland maneuvers shortly.

Security Headship Held to Lie Between Chapman and Dykstra

Carmody Named Chief of U. S. Works, Jones of Loans Unit

By Robert C. Albright

Search for a Federal Security administrator to complete the President's July 1 reorganization of independent New Deal set-ups narrowed last night following definite indications that Social Security Board Chairman Arthur J. Altmeyer will not take the post.

The nomination to head up the new agency apparently lay between Clarence A. Dykstra, president of the University of Wisconsin, reported on his way to Washington, and Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of Interior.

The President appointed John M. Carmody, now Rural Electrification Administrator, to supervise the new Federal Works Agency and Jesse H. Jones, Reconstruction Finance Corporation chairman, head of the new Federal Loan Agency. Both are expected to share in direction of the President's proposed new $3,860,000,000 spending-lending program.

A candidate to succeed himself for six-year reappointment as chairman of the Social Security Board, Altmeyer was said to be definitely unwilling to take over direction of the new Federal Security Agency. Altmeyer was said to believe he could best serve if his field were confined to the Social Security act.

Dykstra, former Cincinnati city manager, who took over the presidency of the University of Wisconsin a little more than a year ago, was said to have left Madison yesterday for Washington.

JOHN M. CARMODY

Friends said they did not know whether Dykstra would be receptive. He has a $25,000-a-year job and would have to step into a $12,000-a-year post with uncertain tenure. A Democrat, he recently has had university budget troubles with Wisconsin's Republican Legislature.

Chapman, a Coloradoan, has been Assistant Secretary of Interior since 1933. Friend of Judge Ben Lindsay, he was five years connected with Lindsay's juvenile court in the vocational guidance of boys; and later was a law associate of the late Senator Costigan, of Colorado. He helped manage the 1932 and 1938 campaigns

Whaley Named Claims Court Chief Justice

Sam Whitaker to Fill Vacancy Created By Promotion

President Roosevelt late yesterday named Judge Richard Smith Whaley chief justice of the United States Court of Claims and then, to fill the bench vacancy, appointed Sam E. Whitaker, Assistant Attorney General, to the court.

Whaley, a native of Charleston, S. C., is a former member of Congress and has served on the Court of Claims bench since June 4, 1930. He is 64. As chief justice he succeeds Judge Fenton Whitlock Booth, who resigned after 34 years on the bench, 11 of them as chief justice.

Whitaker, who heads the claims division of the Department of Justice, is 53 and a native of Winchester, Tenn. He was an Artillery officer in the World War, following which he practiced law in Chattanooga after serving here briefly in the Department of Justice and the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Judge Whaley makes his Washington residence at the Hotel Shoreham. Whitaker lives at 3932 Huntington street northwest.

The new chief justice, subject to confirmation by the Senate, is the youngest man on the Court of Claims bench in point of service. He was elected to Congress in 1913 and served continuously until 1921. He was chairman of the old District Rent Commission from 1923 to 1925, and during the next five years, up to his appointment as judge, was commissioner of the Court of Claims.

Chief Justice Booth was appointed in 1905 by President Theodore Roosevelt and was made chief justice in 1928 by President Coolidge. He is a native of Marshall, Ill.

The Court of Claims, of five judges, was established in 1855. Its jurisdiction is the United States, though the court is located here. Testimony is taken by commissioners anywhere in the country and their evidence, and arguments and briefs of contending parties, are reviewed by the court.

$40,000,000 D. C. Building Strike Ends

Carpenters to Get $12.50 After Monday; $13 a Day by May, 1940

Immediate resumption of work on $40,000,000 in public and private construction here, tied up nearly three weeks by labor troubles, was assured late yesterday when contractors and union carpenters reached terms in their wage dispute.

Employers agreed to a minimum wage of $13 a day on all projects after May 1, 1940, a $1 increase over the present rate. New work undertaken between now and next May will pay $12.50 a day.

Carpenters working under contracts already in force will receive $12 for an eight-hour day, unless the job continues beyond May 1, when the higher rate goes into effect.

Settlement of the carpenters' strike restored peace to the local construction industry, involved in labor disputes since June 5, when 1,800 building laborers walked out.

Leahy Niece Weds Man Not Named On Announcement

Reno, Nev., June 23 (AP).—Elizabeth Ann Tuttle, who changed her mind after sending out 400 wedding invitations, married her second choice today.

The 21-year-old niece of Admiral William D. Leahy, Chief of Naval Operations, became the bride of Dr. Roy Barnett Cohn, 29, of San Francisco. Only a few relatives and friends were present at the Episcopal Church ceremony.

Last Monday the Colusa, Calif., brunette announced cancellation of her plans to wed Clement E. Smoot, jr., 25, of Los Angeles.

Hiker Kills Autoist, Forces Woman to Go on Joyride

By the Associated Press.

St. Johns, Mich., June 23.—A day-long search by Michigan's State police and sheriff's officers led to the finding of the body of George G. Hall, 50, Detroit oil promoter, in a clump of bushes beside a lonely country road near Laingsburg late today.

The search began at dawn after Miss Ruby Doty, 32, of Pinconning, told a weird story of how her escort was shot yesterday by a scarfaced hitchhiker who then made love to her and kept her in Hall's automobile eight hours before releasing her in Grand Rapids.

Miss Doty, also known as Miss Colby and Mrs. Ruby Hall, directed the half a hundred officers in their hunt.

The body was found, covered by an automobile robe just as she said the killer left it, in Shiawassee County near the Clinton County line, 3 miles south of Laingsburg.

State police took Miss Doty to headquarters at East Lansing after she visited the scene. Fingerprint experts and police photographers rushed to the spot before the body was removed to St. Johns, in hope of uncovering clues in the case.

Several business associates of Hall and friends of Miss Doty, all unidentified by State police, also were taken to the East Lansing headquarters for interrogation. Capt. Caesar J. Scavarda said they also planned to question another man at Detroit.

The body, with a bullet wound near the left shoulder, was found

Will Offer Lending Bill Next Week, Says Barkley

Sees Little Dispute Over $3,860,000,000 Plan but Doubts Aug. 1 Adjournment

By Felix Cotten.

Plans for enactment at this session of legislation putting into effect the new $3,860,000,000 lending program were made at a two-hour White House conference last night between President Roosevelt, departmental heads and Congressional leaders.

Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, Democratic leader, said after the conference that an omnibus bill, which would be kept as simple as possible, was being drafted.

Byrd Attacks Program

He will introduce it in the Senate early next week. It will be introduced simultaneously in the House by Representative Rayburn, Texas, Democratic leader.

Meanwhile, Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, leader of conservative opposition to the Administration's "spending for recovery" policy, offered a resolution calling for "searching" Treasury investigation of operations of 30 Government lending corporations. The Treasury would report its findings to Congress at the next session.

Attacking the new lending program, Byrd described it as a bookkeeping operation "to obscure new debts and deficits," and to avoid the necessity of increasing the $45,000,000,000 public debt limit next year.

Little Opposition Foreseen

He had threatened a filibuster if any attempt were made to attach part of the new legislation to the relief bill. Barkley said, however, that no such attempt would be made.

The lending bill will authorize Government loans totaling $3,080,000,000 over a seven-year period for construction of "self-liquidating" projects. Legislation to carry out the second phase of the program, namely, an $800,000,000 increase in the borrowing power of the United States Housing Authority, is already pending.

Barkley admitted that some features of the six-point program might cause controversy, but he predicted that "most of it, if not all, will be passed without any great difficulty."

Industrial Index Rises

Addition of the loan legislation to the agenda of "must" legislation, however, forced leaders to move up adjournment date forecasts again. Barkley said he was still hoping for an August 1 adjournment, but he intimated that the hope was growing fainter.

Other developments were:

The Federal Reserve Board indicated that business had ceased doing a sidewise "crab walk," and had again started moving upward. The index of industrial production, the board said, "increased considerably in the first three weeks of June." This was due primarily to increased output of steel and coal, following settlement of the strike in the coal industry. In May, the industrial production index was 92 per cent of the 1923-25 average, the same as in April.

The President said at a morning press conference that he hoped securities issued by lending agencies to finance the new program would not be tax exempt.

Blames Defaults on Bankers

So far as the foreign loan proposal is concerned, he saw no reason why loans should not be made to Latin-American governments, regardless of defaults on bonds sold in this country. These defaults, he declared, were the result of high pressure tactics by New York investment bankers who, in the 1920's, forced the loans

House Accepts Senate Changes In Tax Bill

Measure Killing Undivided Profits Levy Goes to President

Accepting without a murmur a score of Senate amendments to the $1,644,300,000 corporate tax bill, the House yesterday completed Congressional action on the business relief measure and sped it to the White House for signature.

With the President's approval, the bill will kill the last vestige of the undivided profits tax he sponsored and set up flat 18 per cent taxes on corporations earning more than $25,000 a year.

All speed records for tax legislation were broken, as the bill cleared the Capitol just five days after it was called up on the floor of the House.

Apparently it met two conditions the President had imposed—that it open no new loopholes for tax avoidance and that it raise revenue at least equivalent to the present structure. On the first point, the President was awaiting results of tax-avoidance studies by the Justice and Treasury departments. On the second point, the bill comes within $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 of the present revenue yield, which is satisfactory to the Treasury.

Designed to remove tax "irritants" believed deterring business recovery, the bill leaves open for future study overhauling of the individual income tax structure, scaling down of high-bracket surtaxes, and removal of exemptions from public securities issues.

The Ways and Means Committee on Wednesday will open hearings on the President's recommendations that all future public securities issues be made subject to taxation. House and Senate leaders apparently were agreed on an interim study this fall by joint committees looking to a thoroughgoing revision of the entire tax structure next session.

Besides eliminating the 2½ per cent undivided profits tax remnant and substituting flat 18 per cent taxes on large-earning corporations, the bill finally approved yesterday re-enacts the graduated 12½ to 16 per cent taxes on companies earning up to $25,000.

Some $544,300,000 in nuisance taxes that otherwise would expire June 30 are extended another two years, as is the 3-cent nonlocal mail rate, estimated to yield $100,000,000.

John Carmody REAl Dynamo As Executive

New Boss Should Make Things Hum At Works Agency

Besides his reputation as a dynamic administrator who can make things hum, John M. Carmody, new Federal relief and public works boss, cuts a pretty caper in the square dance.

But he has one diosyncrasy. He will not tell his age, not even under duress.

He comes to the new $12,000-a-year job, one of the highest in the Government outside the Cabinet, with a record as an efficiency man and driving force at the Rural Electrification Administration, which he has headed since February 15, 1937.

Apparently he is in his early fifties. He is more or less heavy-jowled, with sparse, graying hair, and a complexion that borders on the ruddy.

His Telephone Superfluous

Carmody is one Government official who does not need a telephone to talk to anyone occupying the same building. He only has to raise his voice. If he becomes aroused, his voice amplifies automatically.

He has a reputation as a two-fisted, hard-boiled boss with a remarkable facility for galvanizing an office force into action. Associates say, however, that behind this exterior is a kindly, reasonable individual who never harbors an ill thought.

He is a New Dealer. As a result of his membership in the American League of Peace and Democracy, he was called before the Dies committee investigating un-American activities some time ago.

President Roosevelt was attracted to him because of his accomplishments in the REA. Advocates of Government spending have long recognized that money cannot be spent on large construction projects as rapidly as on smaller and simpler projects. A man of driving force is needed to keep a works program from bogging down.

Put REA on Map

Carmody has a reputation in the New Deal as the man who put rural electrification on the map. He is largely responsible for the agency's accomplishments. In 1935, rural electrification was sliding backward. Now one-fifth of the Nation's farms are supplied with current, as compared with one-tenth when REA was created.

The REA is directly responsible for only a minor part of this. But it has stimulated the private power companies into action like nobody's business.

Carmody, whose training is that of an administrator and management engineer, has cut from 60 to 23 the number of operations at the REA in the classification and filing of correspondence.

When introduced to King George at the White House tea given the royal couple, he remarked: "I married a Scottish girl, myself." He lives here with his wife and daughter.

Carmody has held various other Government positions in the last six years. He was born on a farm in Bradford County, Pa., moved to Elmyra, N. Y., and was educated in the local schools and at Elmyra Business College. In his 26 years business experience, he served three terms as president of the Society of Industrial Engineers.

of Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado.

Under prominent consideration had been Miss Josephine Roche, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, who was in Washington yesterday. She was said to be unwilling to take the post.

In addition to consolidating Federal works and lending activities, as heads of the other two agencies, Carmody and Jones would share between them the leadership of much of the President's $3,860,000,000 spending-lending program.

Carmody presumably would be in general charge of proposed loans for municipal and other construction projects, toll roads, a stimulated housing program and possibly purchase and lease to railroads of new equipment. Jones is expected to be in charge of proposed monetary advances to Latin-American countries to be used in buying American goods.

Under the new works agency to be headed by Carmody will fall the Public Works Administration, the Works Progress Administration, the United States Housing Authority, the Bureau of Public Roads, the public buildings branch of the Treasury and the building management branch of the Park Service.

Jones' RFC duties would be broadened by the reorganization plan to overseeing as well the work of the Home Loan Bank Board, the Federal Housing Administration, the Export-Import Bank and the Electric Home and Farm Authority.

Nominations of both Jones and Carmody are subject to Senate confirmation, which is expected without opposition.

Jones, Texas financier, who has been with the RFC since 1932, and its active head since the early New Deal, steps into a post apparently made to order for him. Not in the original reorganization blueprint, the lending unit was created at the behest of Jones' friends at the Capitol. From the first, his has been the only name mentioned for the post. Emil Schram, RFC director, is expected to succeed him as RFC head.

But Carmody's appointment to head up the extensive works unit was a development of the past week and caught many officials in Washington by surprise. Secretary of Interior Ickes had been prominently mentioned for the post, but was said to be unwilling to step down from the Cabinet to confine activities to public works.

Carmody's Rural Electrification Administration was transferred to the Agriculture Department by the President's second reorganization order, and until yesterday's development, it appeared the New Deal's versatile handyman would be subordinated to Secretary Wallace.

Silver Bloc Delays Action On D. C. Taxes

Overton Reports Out Measure in Senate In Place of King

Chances that the revised District tax bill will be considered by the Senate on Monday faded last night when it became evident that the silver filibuster would continue for several days.

The bill, agreed to Thursday by the Senate District Committee, was reported out yesterday afternoon by Senator Overton (Democrat), Louisiana. The name of Senator King (Democrat), Utah, chairman of the District Committee, was crossed off the report and Overton's substituted at the last minute.

Senator King, who would have presented the report ordinarily, was defeated in his effort to get an income tax provision written into the measure—only Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, voting with him on the final vote.

As finally approved, the measure carries the "Overton formula," which places the Federal contribution toward District expenses at near $9,000,000. Otherwise, it is practically the same as the tax bill under which the District now operates.

It modifies the business privilege tax only slightly, reaffirms the present intangible property tax, eliminates the tax on merchandise stored in warehouses for distribution to other points, and leaves the setting of the rate on real estate to the Commissioners.

Inquiry Halts for Squalus Salvaging

Portsmouth, N. H., June 23 (U.P.).—The Squalus hearings ended today—one month to the day after the submarine disaster—but the cause of the disaster was still a mystery.

The court of inquiry will reconvene when the Squalus and its grim cargo of 25 crew members and one officer have been brought to the surface within a month or so.

All testimony in the week-long hearings indicated that a failure of the main engine induction valve flooded the submarine, sinking it off the Isle of Shoals.

Senate Hikes Farm Bill by 25 Millions

Proposal to Double Outlay for Tenants Back in Conference

After winning a $338,000,000 farm bill increase from the House in unbudgeted appropriations for farm parity payments and surplus removal, the Senate yesterday insisted on another $25,000,000 to double the farm tenant outlay.

On recommendation of Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, the Senate sent the buffeted farm bill back to conference with instructions to wrest a $49,984,500 farm tenant appropriation in lieu of the $24,984,500 voted by the House.

The House had yielded previously to the Senate's request for a $225,000,000 parity price appropriation and $113,000,000 more for farm surplus removals, when House urban and rural blocs reached an understanding.

Holding out for a few slashes, the House sent the record-breaking conference report back to the Senate. The Senate decided yesterday not to agree to the House farm tenancy cut, and asked that $250,000 for a new Weather Bureau building here, and $300,000 for "equalizing" extension service funds for 21 States, be restored to the bill as well.

Compromising on cotton export subsidy funds, the House had approved an amendment that would restrict allocations for that purpose to about $36,000,000.

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, leading Senate opponent of cotton export subsidies, told the Senate yesterday he would withdraw his resolution to block the subsidies. George said he was convinced, following the British-American agreement on a cotton-rubber barter, that Secretary of Agriculture Wallace would not go forward with a cotton export subsidy program.

George said Great Britain would not have agreed to the barter proposal "unless she was protected against any export subsidy that would reduce prices."

However, Dr. A. G. Black, chief of the Agriculture Department's marketing bureau, denied the trade would preclude subsidization of exports. He pointed out that the agreement took a possible subsidy program into account.

The pact stipulated, he said, that Great Britain would get the benefit of any subsdiy paid on American exports. He explained that if this Government paid a subsidy of two cents a pound, Great Britain would get approximately 750,000 bales instead of the stipulated 600,000.

President Roosevelt at a press conference said he had asked Wallace for a detailed analysis of the pending farm bill. He has frequently objected to appropriations for parity payments unless taxes were provided to finance them.

Russell said that he and other members from farm sections had not proposed such taxes. "but are willing to vote for any reasonable taxes made necessary."

House Votes Funds For President's Six Secretaries

The House yesterday approved and sent to the Senate an "urgent" $2,249,377 deficiency appropriation for the Federal Communications Commission and other agencies, after rejecting a $20,000 item for the International Committee on Political Refugees.

The refugees committee funds were eliminated on a point of order raised by Representative Taber (Republican), New York, who said the item was not authorized by law. There was no debate on the point.

Included was $98,000 to give President Roosevelt six $10,000-a-year administrative assistants and provide them with office and travel expenses; also $300,000 additional for the Federal Monopoly Committee, $180,000 less than the budget recommended; $150,000 for salaries and other expenses of the new National Gallery of Art and $72,600 for the State Department to cover expenses of international conferences and similar activities.

Arthur S. Flemming Named To Civil Service Commission

Post Staff Photos.

One of the youngest men ever to be named to the Civil Service Commission is Arthur S. Flemming, director of American University's School of Public Affairs, shown in three candid views. His appointment came yesterday from the President Seated at his work-piled desk, 34-year-old Arthur S. Flemming, director of American University's School of Public Affairs, yesterday received word of his appointment by President Roosevelt to be a member of the Civil Service Commission.

Flemming becomes one of the youngest men ever named to the commission. Officials could recall only one who was sent there at an earlier age—Theodore Roosevelt—appointed when he was 30.

A resident of Washington since his graduation from Ohio Wesleyan University in 1927, Flemming helped organize and became the first director of the School of Public Affairs in 1934. Its original enrollment was 85, and today it is 1,200, most of the students being Government employes attending afternoon and evening classes.

The new appointee, whose name is now before the Senate, will succeed Samuel H. Ordway, jr., who resigned as of June 1. Both are Republicans. President Roosevelt was prohibited by statute from naming a Democrat, since the two present members belong to that party.

Chancellor Joseph M. M. Gray announced that Flemming would be granted an indefinite leave of absence as American University's executive officer, as well as head of the School of Public Affairs, which is housed at Nineteenth and F streets northwest.

Asked for his views on civil service, Flemming replied:

"I am enthusiastic about the recent blanketing-in of several thousand Federal employes by the President. I would like to see Congress nail it down eventually to all Federal positions up to the level of policy-forming jobs."

Born in Kingston, N. Y., across the Hudson from Hyde Park, he is the son of Judge and Mrs. Harry H. Flemming, of Kingston. Upon graduation from Ohio Wesleyan, he matriculated at American University to work for his M. A. degree, meanwhile teaching political science and coaching debate teams.

He left the American University faculty in 1930 to work for the United States Daily, now the United States News, as a deskman and reporter. He remained there until 1934, also editing "Uncle Sam's Diary," a current events publication for high school students, during the four-year period.

The bachelor of laws degree was awarded to Flemming in 1933 by George Washington University.

He is married and has two daughters, one 3 years old and the other 4 months. The Flemmings live at 4919 Upton street northwest.

Senate Group Cancels PWA Relief Fund

$125,000,000 Given Back to WPA; Action On Bill Speeded

The powerful Senate Appropriations sub-committee handling relief tentatively has decided to restore to the WPA the entire $125,000,000 earmarked by the House for PWA. The Post was informed last night.

The House proposal to set up a three-man administrative board for WPA also has been discarded by the Senate sub-committee, it was learned. Other controversial points, including abolition of the Federal Theater project and the $40,000 restriction on Federal contributions to locally-sponsored WPA construction projects, will be considered in executive session today.

With the June 30 deadline rapidly approaching, the Administration will attempt to call up the all-important relief measure for Senate action Tuesday, but Senator McCarran (Democrat) indicated yesterday that the silver filibuster might stand in the way.

Action of the Senate Sub-committee in throwing PWA out of the relief bill was believed to have been spurred by Presidential opposition to the unbudgeted PWA grant allotted by the House. The separate appropriation of $500,000,000 for PWA, requested by Secretary Ickes, is given little chance in the Senate sub-committee, especially in view of the President's recently announced self-liquidating loan program.

Senator Adams, chairman of the sub-committee, observed yesterday that "the House didn't give us enough time, but we are not going to rush through this bill—we're going to give every part careful consideration." He would not say if he expected the sub-committee to complete the bill by tonight.

Meanwhile, a group of District C. I. O. of L. trade union leaders warned that passage of the $1,735,000,000 House bill would mean that millions of Americans would be faced with the specter of starvation, just as they were in 1932."

The group, including Charles J. Bell, truck drivers; Joseph Speed, building laborers; Willie Arnheim, street and heavy construction laborers; George Morgan, Building Laborers Counell, and Costas Alexiou, hotel and restaurant employes, complained particularly of provisions in the House bill abandoning the prevailing wage, reducing construction projects and requiring a furlough for WPA workers who have been on the rolls 18 months or more.

On Capitol Hill

Senator John H. Overton (Democrat), Louisiana, came out yesterday for the no-more-than-two-terms-to-a-President tradition and said he did not believe President Roosevelt would be a candidate again.

OVERTON

"I consider it," he said of the tradition, "an unwritten provision of our Constitution, hallowed by time and sanctified by the unbroken precedent of almost a century and a half of our national life.

"Furthermore, I have too high a regard for the President to think that he would even contemplate violating the traditional policy of our Nation in this regard."

The Siamese government has notified the State Department that it is changing the name of Siam to one signifying "The Land of the Thai."

"Thai" (pronounced like tie) is what the Siamese call themselves. They use the name Siam only in speaking to foreigners.

The new name took effect yesterday, anniversary of the coup d'etat establishing the present Siamese government. What the full name will be is not yet known, since it must be worked out by the Siamese Assembly. It will embrace the termination "Thai."

Representative Sumner (Republican), Illinois, the Associated Press said yesterday, interrupted a speaker in the House who was discussing a $133,500 appropriation for a staff of experts to be employed by the Commerce Department in what was termed a "business appeasement program" to inquire:

"Are we sure it is not a program of 'encirclement'?"

An agreement between House and Senate conferees on the controversial TVA legislation seemed near yesterday when Senate members submitted a compromise proposal to House members of the conference committee. The Senate proposal called for authorization of a $75,000,000 bond issue to enable TVA to purchase properties of the Tennessee Electric Power Co., whereas the House had restricted the bond issue to $65,000,000. House members promised to consider the Senate proposal before the committee meets Monday.

U. S. Fails to Tax Father Divine's Earthly Treasures

Special Dispatch to The Post

Kingston, N. Y., June 23.—Income tax collectors for the Federal Government have stormed the ramparts of Father Divine's "Promised Land" in Ulster County and been repelled by the "angels and children" without appreciable gain, it was learned here today.

A two-year campaign to collect income taxes from somebody, based on money spent in the acquisition of Father Divine's collection of farms, stores, gasoline stations, rooming houses, and summer playgrounds has resulted in the collection of $3,000 from several persons, of whom the man whose followers say he is God was not one.

The investigation of Father Divine's affairs here by the Bureau of Internal Revenue was revealed when an agent filed the satisfaction of more than 30 liens against the "extension heavens" with the county clerk here.

L. G. Dreyfus, Jr., Named American Minister to Iran

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt nominated Louis G. Dreyfus, jr., yesterday to be American Minister to Iran, thereby taking a step toward resumption of normal diplomatic relations with that country.

Relations were impaired three years ago after the Iranian Minister Ghaffar Djalal, had been stopped by police at Elkton, Md., charged with speeding, and handcuffed.

Secretary of State Hull expressed his regret and Maryland officials disciplined the officers, but Ghaffar Djalal was recalled by his government.

Dreyfus is at present charge d'affaires at Lima, Peru.

Retreat master will be the Rev. John F. Gallagher, S. J., of St. Aloysius Church.

Gen. Goes Monteiro Visits Langley, Praises Air Force

Langley Field, Va., June 23 (AP).—Gen. Pedro Aurelio de Goes Monteiro, Brazilian army commander, gave high praise today to the people and to the Air Corps of the United States on his one-day visit here, the first stop of a three-week tour of the Nation's military defenses.

"I have been impressed," he said at a luncheon at the Officers Club, "by every evidence of culture and high civilization in the United States . . . I have been able to see what your great President Roosevelt told me yesterday, that although there is a difference in customs and ways of living, the peoples of the United States and Brazil have the same feeling in the heart."

Concerning the Air Corps, he said: "As a general in the army, I have never had a chance to witness such a demonstration as I have seen here today."

Golden Gate Fair Opens Again, Hopes

San Francisco, June 23 (U.P.).—The Golden Gate International Exposition which, after four months of disappointing attendance, threw in all cards and called for a new deal, makes a new start tomorrow.

If a crowd of 75,000, more than twice the daily average, responds, Strub and his aides will take on new hope. If the same number show up again Sunday, they'll look for a successful and happy summer.

Veterans Ask Taylor Quit in PreferenceRow

Executive Committee Here Also Censures Frank Matthews

Dissension over American Legion indorsement of the Starnes bill to curtail the civil service preference long enjoyed by veterans flared into the open Monday night, The Post learned yesterday, when the executive committee of the Legion's District Department demanded the resignation of John Thomas Taylor, national legislative officer.

The action was taken behind closed doors after what was described by Department Adjutant Daniel M. Goodacre as "earnest discussion." The vote was 14 to 12 and included in the censure Frank Matthews, national executive committeeman from New Jersey who heads the veterans preference committee. Matthews testified in behalf of the bill at House Civil Service Committee hearings.

The resolution asked the Legion's national officers to seek the resignation of Taylor and Matthews and if they were not forthcoming, to dismiss the men.

Taylor declared yesterday he had merely carried out the commands of the national executive committee and the veterans preference committee. He declared he had no alternative in seeking adoption of the legislation.

The Starnes bill, now pending in the House committee, would remove the five-point bonus on examinations for veterans who did not serve in any war or campaign. For war veterans themselves, it would apply the bonus to the examination mark only when the original grade was above 70 per cent, the passing mark. Under present provisions, the five points are added at the outset, so that a veteran getting 65 on a given examination is passed. Similarly, the 10-point bonus now given service-disabled veterans would apply only to those who were disabled in war, and would be added only if the passing grade were earned beforehand.

Orders of the national executive committee, first voiced in 1937 and repeated in November, 1938 urged the veterans preference committee, "in the event any attempt be made to revoke or take from the veterans any preference now in effect, that such attempt be vigorously opposed." Prompt action was ordered to "broaden" preferences already enjoyed.

Veterans' preferences have long been a storm center in Government administration, with many employing officers known to be reluctant to hire former service men. The Civil Service Commission has indicated its support of the Starnes bill preference changes as an acceptable compromise, and that Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, House Civil Service Committee chairman, indicated his committee would not report favorably legislation to write into the law any preferences as extensive as those which now exist only by virtue of executive order.

Luther League Members Hear Choir of 250

Dr. Byrd Welcomes Youths at Maryland University Session

The fifth international convention of the Luther League of the American Lutheran Church came to a climax last night as 250 youthful voices were lifted in a chorus of sacred music at Maryland University.

Directed by Prof. Ellis E. Snyder, of Capitol University, Columbus, Ohio, the program was heard in Ritchie Coliseum, with Bach selections featured. Mrs. Theodore Fricke, wife of the pastor of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, this city, sang several pieces, and Mrs. Clayton E. Baus played the organ prelude.

Earlier in the day John D. Stegenman, of Boyden, Iowa, was re-elected president of the league; the Rev. C. A. Wiederanders, of Toledo, Ohio, first vice president; Clayton Fischer, Ottawa Lake, Mich., second vice president, and Miss Ruth Doermann, Blue Island, Ill., secretary.

Greetings were brought by Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of Maryland University.

"I believe there is no type of work which means so much to the security of America as that which you are doing," he declared. "In the world and in this country today, there are many slogans and mottoes and ever so many movements and campaigns—but not all are worth while. There was never so much propaganda."

Dr. Byrd warned that "we must accept the responsibilities that go with freedom if we are to succeed. If we are to continue our liberty, we must base our actions on the right kind of think. The youth of the Lutheran Church have a grave responsibility to meet and a memorable heritage to continue."

Following adjournment this morning, many of the delegates will go on to the New York World's Fair; some will begin a tour of historical Virginia, and others will return to their homes in 20 States and Canada.

Four Sentenced in Narcotic Case

Smashing of an extensive narcotic ring whose elaborate headquarters here were raided last November was completed yesterday with the sentencing of four persons by Justice Laws in District Court.

Detective Lieut Joseph Shimon hid behind a false panel in the gang's Fifteenth street northwest apartment and gathered the evidence on which the warrants were issued. Assistant District Attorney McNeil told the court that the gang had an extensive mail order business and dispatched regular shipments. The narcotic dealers used an intricate code to conceal their operations.

Sentenced yesterday were Mrs. Blanche Brawley, 4 to 15 months in jail; Thomas Clark, 3 to 10 months; John Johnson, 3 to 15 months, and Thomas May Parker, 4 to 6 months, with probation of the sentence.

The four pleaded guilty to criminal conspiracy.

Schulte Bill Cuts Price, Says Milk Committee

Reports Six Reasons Why Measure Should Be Passed by House

Six specific reasons why the Schulte milk bill should be passed when it comes up for discussion on the floor Monday were presented yesterday in a formal report by the House District Committee.

The six points countered the nine objections raised to the measure Thursday in a statement by the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association. The presentation indicates that the bitter fight which has marked milk proceedings before the committee for several months will be continued before the House when the final vote is taken.

Says It Would Cut Prices

According to the committee report, the controversial bill would accomplish the following purposes:

It would eliminate trade barriers which have been erected against the importation of milk and cream from other sections.

It would break up the "monopoly now enjoyed" by the Maryland-Virginia group and the National Dairy Products Corporation.

It would enable the Government to put into force testing regulations of the United States Public Health Service, which "it has sponsored and built up through an expenditure of large sums of public monies."

It would insure Washington consumers milk and cream at prices below those now prevailing.

It would reduce the cost of production to the farmer by eliminating "all unnecessary and restrictive health ordinances having absolutely no direct health considerations."

It would open the District market to the whole United States, freeing competition.

Twelve other bills are on the District Committee calendar for consideration at the Monday District Day. The controversial lunacy commission measure and the taxicab-limitation bill are among them, but it is probable that action on the two will be postponed for another week.

Buckner, Philippine Promoter, Held 'Bibulous, but No Thief'

'Nothing Wrong' in Drinking, Show-Girl Parties With Members of Congress, His Attorney Contends in Opening Defense

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 23.—William P. Buckner, jr., promoter, accused with four others of conspiracy to manipulate the market in defaulted Philippine railway bonds, was described today by his counsel as perhaps "a trifle bibulous, but no thief."

Telling the jury what he expected to prove, Attorney John Minton pictured the gay Buckner as an "impetuous, inexperienced young man," but one whose activities, however bizarre, were undertaken in good faith.

As the defense thus got under way, Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard dismissed various counts in the indictment against Codefendants Felipe Buencamino, a member of the Philippine National Legislature; C. W. Turner, a stockbroker, and John Stuart Hyde, a former British army officer.

Buencamino and Turner remained charged with conspiracy and mail fraud in one count; Hyde with conspiracy only. William J. Gillespie, a broker, the fifth defendant, and Buckner face seven counts of mail fraud and one of conspiracy.

The Government contended that Buckner, as chairman of a protective committee of Philippine railway bondholders, headed a scheme under which the accused conspirators planned to buy bonds in a low market in anticipation of their redemption by the Philippine government.

Buckner is accused as well of having flung away in high living much of the money advanced by fellow bondholders with the understanding that he would use it to further their interests.

As to Buckner's alleged free-handedness with the committee's money, Minton said, he had "regarded his job as one of salesmanship."

Buckner's campaign to have the bonds redeemed at par, the lawyer went on, "may have been an absurd idea, but it was sincere and he did everything he could to influence Senators and Congressmen to obtain the legislation necessary.

"I maintain that there is nothing wrong in entertaining Congressmen (here the reference was to Government charges that Buckner put on champagne and showgirl parties in Washington with bondholders' money) in an effort to accomplish a legitimate purpose."

Among first defense witnesses were three who testified that in Buckner's convivial evenings they had no knowledge that he'd ever paid the check with bondholders' money.

They were Tillie Fripp, a buxom negress who operates a Harlem "chicken shack;" Joseph Moss, a night club proprietor, and Louis Viola, a taxicab driver.

In his opening address, Harold R. Brophy, attorney for Gillespie, said his client was a "hard-working man who did his best for the bondholders.

"He may have taken a drink too many, but that's not the charge here."

Gillespie, the lawyer added, not only made no money from the committee's activities, but lost some of his own.

"He was more or less the water-boy—or maybe I should say the bottle boy—for the committee," Brophy remarked.

Bank Teller Agrees To Face Trial Here

Bernard Phillips Way, former bank teller under indictment here for making false entries, waived extradition yesterday in San Francisco, the Associated Press reported. He will be returned here for trial.

Way quit his job in the savings division of the Second National Bank in July, 1936, to join the Army. Later a shortage of $1,016.23 was reported, which was linked with what authorities said were discrepancies in his accounts.

Opposition Party Of Relief Union Convenes Today

Washington's second conference of unemployed and WPA workers within the month will begin at 10 a. m. today in the Pythian Temple, when 200 delegates of an opposition party to the Workers Alliance will lay plans for an independent national unemployment and WPA federation.

According to Lloyd Leith, arrangements committee chairman, the delegates are being sent by independent unions, many of which formally were connected with the Workers Alliance, which sponsored the Right-to-Work Conference here recently. Leith said the unions have withdrawn from the alliance because of its "bureacratic tendencies" and added that it now represents only a fragment of the unemployed and relief workers.

The conference, he said, will seek to obtain enlarged relief appropriations, will oppose the return of relief to the States and will urge that the President call a Nation-wide conference on unemployment.

According to August Radicsky, of Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia, there must be a lot of persons who doze off in their bathtubs. He's just invented the lazy bather's solace, a tub that is so constructed that its user can drop gently off to sleep without getting his head under water—and being hauled away to the morticians.

The inside of the tub, as shown by diagram now on file at the United States Patent Office, resembles a chaise lounge suffering from an attack of the bends. Mr. Radimsky, whose patent attorneys are Chatwin & Co., of London, England, insists that it is actually the last splash in comfort, as well as safety.

Mr. Radimsky's idea is that "to step sure-footed out of the full bathtub requires particular skill on the part of any user." According to his patent—No. 2163154 — that will be solved also by his invention. Another of its advantages is that it will keep down the high price of water, as less of that will be needed to immerse the subject.

However, you still can slip on the soap.

Policeman Kills Bandit, Falls Dead Of Two Wounds

Detroit, June 23 (INS).—Summoning his last bit of strength today, Policeman Warren Raby, with two bullets in his body, grimly staggered 20 feet, thrust his service revolver into the mouth of his bandit assailant and killed him a split second before he himself fell dead.

The dead bandit was Anthony Hessler, alias Anthony Phillips, 29, of St. Louis. Shortly before he had held up a finance company and robbed it of $300.

A girl companion of the bandit, Hildegard Sundell, 31, fled screaming, but was arrested by another policeman. Authorities said she had aided Hessler in a series of similar robberies.

Thief Demands Trial, Convicted In 27 Minutes

Robert Scott, colored, 22, of 226 F street northwest, who escaped prosecution four times on charges of stealing from automobiles by demanding a jury trial, yesterday made the same demand in Police Court and found himself convicted and sentenced in record time of 27 minutes.

Arrested Thursday and charged with stealing two cameras from a parked automobile and tampering with an automobile, he asked a jury trial when arraigned yesterday before Judge Casey. After a hasty conference with Policeman Charles E. Scott, who made the arrest, Judge Casey called Judge Curran, presiding over the jury branch of Police Court, and arranged an immediate jury trial. Robert Scott was sentenced to serve 90 days on each theft charge and to pay a $25 fine or serve 15 days on the tampering charge.

Judge Casey's action came when Scott's police record showed he had escaped trial four times for lack of prosecution because witnesses, all from out of town, had left for their homes. Yesterday's prosecuting witness was a North Dakota woman, who said she was leaving the city immediately.

Taxpayer Sues To Force Levies On U. S. Workers

William J. Kraus, of Cleveland, Ohio, set out single-handed yesterday to compel Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Guy T. Helvering, Collector of Internal Revenue, to collect back income taxes from the more than 1,000,000 employes of the Government, the 48 States, cities and public agencies.

Kraus was interested, he said in his complaint filed in District Court, because he was a taxpayer himself, both to the Federal Government and to the State of Ohio. The complaint said Morgenthau and Helvering "failed, neglected and refused" to try to collect income taxes for 1938 and the years before that from public servants. This cost the Government a great deal of money, the complaint said, and was unfair to Kraus.

Kraus, as his own attorney, and Attorney Myron D. Malitz signed the complaint for an order directing the Treasury to get busy and collect from the public servants.

Police Lose Race To Notify Son Father Is Dying

Washington and Maryland police last night lost a race against time and death.

A radio call was flashed from the District for Maryland State police to notify Howard Fearson, jr., known to be on the road between here and Cumberland, that his father was dying at his home, 1536 D street northeast.

Within an hour the son was located in Hagerstown, but a telephone call revealed his father had died meanwhile of a heart attack.

Mr. Fearson was 76 and a native of Washington. He had retired ten years ago as a bricklayer. He is survived by seven daughters and three sons.

Cancer Center Cornerstone to Be Laid Today

Senator Bone, Parran To Officiate at The Dedication

The cornerstone of the new $750,000 National Cancer Institute's building on the Rockville Pike, near Bethesda, Md., will be laid at 4:30 p. m. today.

Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington, co-author of the act which authorized construction of the building, and Surgeon General Parran, chairman of the National Advisory Cancer Council, will lead the dedication ceremonies.

Dr. Thompson to Direct

The three-story cancer center building, scheduled to open in September, will provide laboratory apparatus and research materials for 30 scientists, research technicians, and administrative officers.

Among those who will work in the center will be scientists now stationed at the Gibbs Memorial Laboratory in Cambridge, Mass., and staff members now in the old Institute of Health, at Twenty-fifth and E streets northwest.

They will work under direction of Dr. L. R. Thompson, director of the National Institute of Health; Dr. Carl Voegtlin, chief of the Cancer Institute; Dr. R. L. Spencer, executive assistant, and Dr. Ludvig Hektoen, executive director of the National Advisory Cancer Council.

President Conant on Council

The council will hold its quarterly business meeting before the dedication ceremonies. Members of the council include President Conant, of Harvard University; Dr. Arthur H. Compton, University of Chicago professor and Nobel prize winner in physics; Dr. Mont R. Reid, surgeon at Cincinnati General Hospital, and professor of surgery at the University of Cincinnati; Dr. Clarence C. Little, managing director of the American Society for the Control of Cancer and director of the Jackson Memorial Laboratory at Bar Harbor, Me. and Dr. James B. Murphy, of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research.

Congress to Get Loan Bill in Week

on the borrowing country and the bonds on American investors.

Barkley said the Administration's object was to make loans for self-liquidating projects at an average interest rate of 2½% or 3 per cent. He pointed out that the lower the interest rate, the greater the public interest in taking advantage of loan opportunities, and the larger the number of self-liquidating projects.

Besides the proposal for loans to foreign governments, which threatens to arouse opposition in Congress, the program calls for construction of projects similar to those which the Public Works Administration has been financing, toll roads, bridges, and the like, rural electrification expansion, farm tenant aid and purchase of railway equipment for poorer railroads.

New Lending Agency Out

Although the President, in forwarding the program to Congress, indicated that the new Federal Works Agency, of which John M. Carmody has been named head, would handle the $500,000,000 rail equipment program, it appeared yesterday that it might go to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

In fact, an anomalous feature of the new plan is that the new lending agency would have little to do with it, at least in the form in which it was submitted to Congress.

The omnibus bill is being drafted, Barkley explained, by Edward H. Foley, jr., Treasury general counsel, and Claude E. Hamilton, jr., RFC general counsel. Barkley and Rayburn are assisting.

Mainly Loan Limit Boosts

Certain phases of the program, Barkley explained, will not require legislation. What these will be is not definite, he said. It was felt, however, that legislation might not be necessary to authorize the Export-Import Bank to make foreign loans, or to carry out the railroad equipment program.

If these features could be eliminated from the omnibus bill, controversy would be spared. The bill, it is expected, will provide mainly for increases in loan limits of agencies handling the program.

Barkley made clear that there is no intention of lending money to governments which have defaulted on war debts. This would be in violation of the Johnson foreign loan act.

Irked by Long Session.

The conference was called, it was believed, as a result of the lukewarm reception given the lending program when it was announced Thursday. Leaders were by no means overjoyed at the prospect of delaying adjournment to pass the necessary legislation.

Those taking part in the conference, besides the President, Barkley and Rayburn, were Jesse H. Jones, new lending agency head; Foley, Hamilton, Carmody and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau; Democratic Senators Harrison, Mississippi, Finance Committee chairman; Byrnes, South Carolina, and Wagner, New York, Banking and Currency Committee chairman, and Democratic Representatives Doughton, North Carolina, Ways and Means chairman; Taylor, Colorado, Appropriations Committee chairman, and Steagall, Alabama, Banking and Currency Committee chairman.

U. S. Offers 64c Silver Extension

Night Sessions Threatened

"This silver question is the most important thing I ever had hold of, and I don't intend to quit," said McCarran. "This means the life of 11 mining States, and directly affects 1,000,000 people."

When Barkley renewed his previous attempts to fix a time for voting on amendments to the monetary bill, it was again McCarran who demurred. The silver bloc's delaying tactics have driven Administration leaders to threaten night sessions next week; and as a taste of unpleasant things in store, Senatorial week-ends were ruined by calling a session for 11 this morning.

Possibilities of a compromise on the silver question were suggested yesterday on the basis that opponents of silver purchase might consent to a price of 77½ cents, while the silverites might agree to putting a stop to all American purchase of foreign-mined silver.

Attacking the "Alice-in-Wonderland silver program," Senator Townsend (Republican) of Delaware, denounced the purchase of foreign silver as "a waste of American wealth."

"We might as well just give away to foreign countries the goods we now export in exchange for silver, for all the good the imported silver does us," declared Townsend.

Morgenthau Criticized

One of the strongest Administration supporters in the Senate, Senator Pittman, vigorously criticized Secretary Morgenthau for "indifference to unemployment in the Western States."

The Treasury's reduction in the price of silver in 1937 from 77.50 to 64.64 cents was "inexcusable," said Pittman, adding that Morgenthau had depended on the advice of "one of his braintrusters from New York."

Pittman tangled with Barkley when the latter reminded him that if the monetary bill does not pass by June 30, the domestic silver purchase program will cease and the price of silver will plummet to the world level.

"You're trying to place me in the same position that Hitler placed Chamberlain at Munich," shouted Pittman.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, leader of the inflationist group, sorrowfully predicted yesterday that his silverite allies might leave him "holding the bag" if any compromise could be reached on the price of silver—even if a continuation of the 64.64 cent price were guaranteed.

Since the war, he has served at Norfolk, Va., on the International Ice Patrol and at Mobile, Ala., besides here and at New Orleans.

Britain Demands 'Insults' Cease

before any other aspects of the Tientsin question are tackled, is a definite assurance from Tokyo that British subjects seeking to enter the barricaded Anglo-French concession district of Tientsin will no longer be forced to endure stripping, face-slapping and other humiliating indignities which have been visited upon them by Japanese sentries.

If such assurance is not speedily forthcoming, Lord Halifax made it plain to Ambassador Shigemitsu, the British government will consider itself justified in deciding upon economic reprisals that would be sure to hurt Japan which imports more than 60 per cent of its vital war materials from Britain, France and the United States.

Hope for Accord Brightens

Shigemitsu had just left the foreign office when Maisky entered. Lord Halifax was understood to have requested Maisky to urge the Soviet government to expedite the Moscow negotiations, now in progress, for an Anglo-French-Soviet mutual aid accord, covering Europe.

To this the Soviet Ambassador replied with a reiteration of Russia's insistence that her Baltic neighbors—Latvia, Estonia and Finland—be specifically named and guaranteed against aggression by Britain, France and the U. S. S. R. In exchange, it was learned, Maisky informed Halifax his government is willing to join in guaranteeing not only the eastern European countries of Poland and Rumania, but also the western lands—Holland, Belgium and Switzerland, which lie adjacent or close to Britain and France.

Introduced as a new factor in the protracted and complicated negotiations, the Soviet offer to pledge aid to western Europe's smaller countries was regarded by many as a possible solution of the Anglo-Soviet differences to the satisfaction of both parties. In London's Soviet circles diplomats said they were "not pessimistic" after Maisky's visit to Halifax.

No Reprisals Yet

The air battles reported today on the Manchukuoan border between Soviet and Japanese planes appeared to draw Britain and Russia closer together in their respective Far Eastern problems, although the projected Anglo-French-Soviet pact is designed to stay within the confines of Europe.

More than five hours before it took place, the Halifax-Shigemitsu conference was announced by Chamberlain in Commons. The premier predicted:

"There is no doubt that Lord Halifax will make it very clear to the ambassador what he thinks of these intolerable insults."

Questioned whether the British government is preparing to impose immediate reprisals on Japan, Chamberlain cautiously replied:

"We do not think that matters have gotten to that stage as yet."

Student Fliers Hug Earth the Morning After

Minnesota Professor Reveals 'Gentlemen's Agreement' to CAA

Students in the University of Minnesota flight training course have a "gentlemen's agreement" not to fly the "morning after the night before," Prof. John D. Ackerman told the Civil Aeronautics Authority yesterday.

Here with representatives of 12 other colleges to discuss results of the Government-supported training program, Prof. Akerman reported the move, among others taken at his institution, to promote safety of flying.

Prof. M. C. Stone, of the North Texas Agricultural College, in revealing "the Minnesota safety plan" following yesterday's closed meeting, said that at his school they barred students from flying when fatigued.

Not Total Success

"We try to discourage 'the nights before,'" he said, and added "not with 100 per cent success."

Representatives of the colleges conducting the pilot training and managers of the air fields actually giving the instruction were called here for a round-table discussion with CAA officials, preparatory to launching a large scale program at more than 200 colleges next fall. The new Government civil air training plan under which 15,000 college students are to be given flight instruction next year, was tried out this spring with 330 students at 13 selected schools.

The delegates reported that 226 of the 330 have already earned private pilot's licenses. Bad weather has delayed instruction of the others, it was said, and they will be licensed within two weeks. Sixty-five of the most promising of the students were chosen for further training in seaplanes and gliders this summer, it was announced.

Academics Questioned

Professor R. H. Smith, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, reported that the best scholars appeared to make the best fliers, but other delegates reported that success in flying seemed to have no connection with academic standing.

One of the delegates, whose identity others would not reveal, declared that his student's marks rose materially after they started the flight training course. He explained this trend, it was said, by suggesting that their surplus energies were diverted to something more beneficial than "jitter-bugging and gold-fish swallowing."

D. C. Building Strike Settled

The building laborers returned to their jobs yesterday, after agreeing to submit their wage demands to Labor Department arbitration.

Negotiations on their pay rate will open Monday or Tuesday, according to Howard T. Colvin, of the Conciliation Service.

On Job Monday

Saturday is a holiday in the union building trades and on Monday all crafts will be on the job. Major projects which were held up by the laborers' and carpenters' walkouts included the Government Printing Office annex, National Cancer Institute, Jefferson Memorial and Doctors Hospital.

The polite but persistent tactics of Colvin, veteran Labor Department conciliator, were credited for the solution of both strikes. Both the union and the employers have agreed to have him arbitrate the laborers' demands for 80 cents an hour, unskilled, and 95 cents, semi-skilled. The previous scale was 70 cents, with no differential.

The Government, contractors and workers alike are relieved at the final settlement of the strikes, since no more walkouts in the building trades over wages and hours need be expected for the remainder of this year, at least. Working agreements are now in effect with all of the trades—iron workers, bricklayers, tile setters, electrical workers, etc.

Liquor-Runner Gets 30 Years In 2 Car Deaths

Companion in Flight From Tax Agents Is Given Shorter Term

Charles S. Lee, jr., 34-year-old colored liquor runner, yesterday was sentenced to 30 years in prison for killing two persons in an automobile accident while he was fleeing Government agents. Lee was convicted of second-degree murder.

Justice Laws told Lee he was constrained to punish him severely because his record showed that twice he was convicted of using a smoke screen to evade pursuing officers, which showed a wanton disregard for the lives of others.

Worster P. Dorey, 34, colored, who was Lee's companion, was sentenced to three to five years. He was convicted of manslaughter, on his plea that he was not involved in the liquor running, but merely went riding with Lee.

The men had 75 gallons of illicit liquor in their car when tax officers chased them last September 4. The men were stopped once, near St. Elizabeths Hospital, but broke free and sped off. At Nichols avenue and Sheridan road the liquor car crashed into one carrying 2-year-old Muriel J. Lanham, of 526 Ninth street southeast, and Marion Wood, 20, of 510 Tenth street southeast. The vehicles burst into flames and the baby and youth were killed.

U. S. Trades Cotton For British Rubber

He pointed to the difficulty of importing rubber in case Britain should become engaged in a war, or the normal trade routes for rubber should be menaced.

He said Britain's impounding of 600,000 bales would save this country $2,400,000 in storage charges alone, while the rubber to be received will be placed in Army and Navy storehouses, requiring little storage expense and probably no insurance.

The price of rubber and the price of cotton in the exchange will be determined from the averages from January 1 of this year to June 23. Ambassador Kennedy was credited with reaching agreement for the basing of the cotton price on prices here, rather than on the lower Liverpool quotations.

He also was credited with extending the storage time from the contemplated five years to seven years. Byrnes said that "in every five years we can count on having at least one small crop that will reduce the carryover. The abnormal situation now existing will adjust itself long before the end of the seven-year period.

The rubber to be received will comprise from 15 to 20 per cent of this country's normal annual consumption, but by using reclaimed rubber and new methods of producing synthetic rubber, Dr. Feis said, the country's emergency supply in wartime could be considerably increased.

Rubber, due to deterioration, must be "turned over" at least every 18 months. The United States thus will be obliged to release parts of its stock to industry with some regularity and replenish the stocks. No such necessity exists for cotton.

A "major war emergency" such as is referred to in the agreement, Dr. Feis explained, might be a clash in which neither the United States nor Britain was engaged, but would make it unduly difficult, dangerous or costly to obtain the rubber or cotton.

While it had been hoped that some of the surplus wheat in this country might be traded away, it was understood that Canada had objected to Britain taking United States wheat in preference to hers.

Cotton to be delivered will be taken from the 1934 crop, on which loans of 12 cents a pound were made, and on which the storage charges now total about 3 cents a pound, and the 1937 crop on which 9 cent loans were made.

David Stolaroff Hurt By Crash in Indiana

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Remington, Ind., June 23.—David Stolaroff, of Washington, D. C., 26-year-old employe of the Railroad Retirement Board, was seriously injured when his automobile smashed into a bridge abutment near here today.

He was driving to the West Coast after transfer to a California office of the board, according to friends here. His Washington address was 1776 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

10 feet from the road, lying behind a blooming syringa bush. Capt. Scavarda said there were indications the automobile had been driven off the road—there was no fence—and up to the bush.

In describing her experience of the previous day, Miss Doty told officers:

"It was like a terrible dream."

Tense, white-lipped and tearless, she related that Hall was shot in the back late yesterday as she drove his car en route from Wayland to Pinconning, and his body dumped out by the slayer, who then drove her about the countryside for eight hours before he left her, on her promise of a "date," in Grand Rapids early this morning.

"Blue Sky" Case Pending

Confused by hours of riding over unfamiliar rural roads, she was unable to describe accurately the spot where she said Hall's body was dragged into the grass and covered by a blanket from the auto.

Clinton County sheriff's deputies joined more than 40 State policemen in an extensive search of an area near Round Lake, south of St. John's. State police ordered detention for questioning of a man whose identity they withheld.

Hall was vice president and secretary of the Hal-Be-Oyle & Gas Corporation, a holding company for ten Michigan oil concerns. Its offices in Detroit have been closed since February 7 when warrants were issued charging Hall and two associates with violating the Michigan "blue sky" law. That charge still is pending.

Hall's wife, Mrs. Jessie Hall, and her two children have been staying at an Oakland County lake.

D. C. Court Acts To Equalize Assignments

Wheat Announces Plan Designed to Speed Up Justice

The District Court justices took another whack yesterday at "the law's delays" which have got their civil docket two years behind schedule by setting up a case-dispatcher system.

The new system follows adoption of a plan for pre-trial hearings, where persons involved in lawsuits may confer informally with a judge and either settle the case or agree on facts which might take days to bring out before a jury.

The new rule, announced by Chief Justice Wheat, designates an assignment justice to supervise the work of the assignment commissioner's office, where cases are distributed for trial. The rule then says:

"When a trial justice is ready or nearly ready to receive a case for trial, the assignment commissioner shall send him the next case in order on one of the daily assignments.

This system is expected to keep the courts running smoothly. It is designed to prevent instances such as have occurred when a justice gets quickly through his docket for the day and then finds that he has nothing to do, while one of his colleagues is unable to get through more than half of his assignment.

JapanDemands U. S., British Oil Properties

Move Held a Step To Force Aliens Out Of North China

By International News Service.

Peiping, (Saturday) June 24.—The Japanese-operated North China Railway Administration today served demands on the American Standard Oil Company and the British Asiatic Petroleum Company to relinquish their storage tanks and offices at several points along the rail line within six weeks.

This constituted the latest serious move by Japan in the current drive to construct a "new order" in East Asia which would relegate Occidental powers to a secondary position in China.

[At Hongkong it was officially announced that Japanese naval authorities at Swatow have agreed to the right of British shipping to enter blockaded Swatow effective at noon today (midnight Friday E.S.T.), according to the United Press.

[Mail, food and passengers will be landed at the blockaded port today, it was said.

[Japanese announced that 22 Japanese were killed and 44 wounded in Wednesday's occupation of Swatow. Chinese losses were put at 600 dead and 98 captured.—Editor's note.]

Strategic Points Affected

The Japanese railway officials notified the Standard and Asiatic concerns that the space now used by them for their tanks and offices would be needed for the "extension of the railway yards."

While it was presumed the oil companies would be compensated for their properties if they consented to give them up, compliance with the Japanese demand, business experts said, would gravely cripple operations of the American and British petroleum concerns throughout a vast area of North China.

The railway administration named the important terminal cities of Kalgan, inner Mongolian capital, and Shichchiachwang among the cities and towns where the Standard and Asiatic companies are expected to give up their storage tanks and offices.

Italy Pledges Aid

Tientsin, June 23 (AP).—The British consul general sent a new protest to the Japanese today against undressing and searching of British subjects at concession barriers, but a fresh incident of that kind was reported almost immediately thereafter.

Cecil Davis, an honorary agent for the New Zealand government, declared he was slapped three times with his passport by a Japanese gendarme, who, with three colleagues, forced him to stand naked in the examining shed through which a dozen foreign women were passing.

Davis was the ninth Briton to report being subjected to indignities in the past two days by the Japanese who established blockades of the British and French concessions ten days ago.

Italy Backs Japan

[From Tokyo Italy was reported to have pledged "full co-operation with the Japanese military authorities in North China" in the present crisis between Japan and the occidental democracies, International News Service reported.

[A Japanese dispatch from Peiping receive din Tokyo this morning quoted Rear Admiral Gonzaga, commander in chief of the Italian fleet in the Far East, as having personally delivered this pledge to Gen. Sugiyama, commander of Japan's army in North China.

[This marked the first definite move by the Italo-German alliance to support and aid openly Japan's projected "new order" in East Asia, which is vigorously opposed by Great Britain, France and the United States.

Axis Support Indicated

[It was also the first indication of Italo-German support for the Japanese blockade of the British and French concessions at Tientsin, the blockade of the Kulangsu foreign settlement off Amoy and other recent Japanese moves against the interests of third powers in China.—Editor's note.]

[Mitsuru Toyama, venerable chief of the powerful ultra-nationalist Black Dragon Society, today petitioned Emperor Hirohito to "obtain belligerent rights" for Japan's armed forces in China. In effect he appealed for a declaration of war, the United Press said.

[Kanichi Otake, a member of the House of Peers, Yujiro Miyake, veteral publicist, and Kumitaro Honda, former Ambassador to Germany, signed the petition with Toyama.

[The move was all but unprecedented. Under the constitution all Japanese have the right to petition the throne but in practice few if any petitions ever are delivered.—Editor's note.]

The latest British protest here, made by Maj. G. A. Herbert, consul, was against incidents yesterday. No reply to previous protests had been received, it was said.

Herbert also reported to London on the detention of G. A. Smith, British exporter, since June 17. The Japanese captors have made an agreement with Smith to leave Tientsin as a condition for his release, Herbert said. Smith was active against Japanese-Korean smuggling as traffic superintendent of the Mukden-Peiping Railway in 1935-38.

Foreign residents are watching the case closely, since under extraterritoriality laws in China Smith should have been handed over to British authorities upon demand.

The Japanese appear to be confining their searching to British subjects, but United States Consul Frederick W. Hinke made representations against inconveniences suffered by Americans at the barricades. Consulate attaches said there was no formal protest.

Japanese Laugh at Insults

[The Japanese denied that Britons were being singled out for discourteous treatment, according to the United Press.

[The Domei (Japanese) News Agency announced that Japanese authorities had "dismissed with laughter as malicious propaganda" all such reports and accusations.

["All people are treated alike but are dealt with according to their individual merits," the dispatch said. "Britons are typically arrogant."

[The anger of the blockaded British residents mounted as accounts of the experiences at the concession gates spread. Some told of being stripped naked, others to their undercloths.—Editor's note.]

The food situation worsened. Meat and fresh vegeables especially were scarce.

[Rumors that British warplanes from the aircraft carrier Hermes were preparing to drop foodstuffs on the blockaded British concession led to a strengthening of Japanese forces outside the electrically charged barriers of the area, International News Service said.

[Criss-crossing beams from Japanese anti-aircraft searchlight batteries lighted the sky as rumors spread among the Chinese of a possible attempt by the British planes to defeat the 10-day-old blockade—Editor's note.]

Although Japanese have apologized for blockading the French concession because it adjoins the British area, their sentries advanced a short distance onto the bridge leading into French territory last night. The French took no official cognizance, but considerable resentment was expressed privately.

Domei, the Japanese news agency, quoted Japanese authorities as charging the British with spreading "slandering reports" of indignities to arouse sympathy abroad, and added that the "British government should change its attitude if it doesn't want subjects searched." Searching was conducted in a "courteous manner," Domei declared.

The British consul general announced he had received another letter repeating demands of the Peiping provisional (Japanese controlled) government for surrender of four alleged Chinese terrorists held by the British, co-operation in circulating Japanese currency and with the provisional government's "general policy."

Text of Pact to Exchange Cotton for British Rubber

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Ambasador to Great Britain Joseph P. Kennedy (right) is shown in London yesterday as he signed an agreement by which American cotton would go to Great Britain for use in wartime in exchange for British rubber. Oliver Stanley (left), president of the Board of Trade, signed for Great Britain

The text of the agreement between the United States and Great Britain for the exchange of rubber for cotton follows:

AGREEMENT between the Governments of the United States of America and the United Kingdom for the exchange of cotton and rubber.

1. The United States Government will supply to the Government of the United Kingdom, delivered on board ship, compressed to high density, at New Orleans, La., and at other Gulf and Atlantic deep water ports, to be agreed upon between the two governments, 600,000 bales of raw cotton of grades and staples which will be specified by the government of the United Kingdom. The United States Government will make available in adequate quantities for such purpose cotton from the stock on which the United States Government has made advances to growers.

(A) The price will be fixed on the basis of the average market price as published by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics for middling ⅞-inch cotton during the period January 1—June 23, 1939, for spot delivery at New Orleans, plus 0.24 cent per pound for cost of compression and delivery on board ship, with adjustments in price for other grades and staples according to differences above or below middling ⅞-inch quoted in that period.

(B) The cotton will be inspected to determine its classification in accordance with the universal cotton standards for grade and the official standards of the United States for staple, and will be accepted, by experts appointed by the government of the United Kingdom. Any disputes which may arise will be settled by boards of referees constituted of three members, of whom one shall be nominated by the government of the United Kingdom.

Will Be Invoiced

(C) Samples representing the cotton of the grades and staples specified by the government of the United Kingdom will be made available for inspection and acceptance during a period of six months beginning 15 days after the entry into force of this agreement, and such inspection and acceptance will be made within a reasonable time after the cotton is so made available. Delivery at the warehouse at the port of sailing with provision for free delivery on board ship at high density will be made within 15 days after inspection and acceptance, and storage and insurance charges will be borne by the United States Government for a perod of two weeksi, but no more, after delivery at the warehouse at the port of sailing.

(D) All cotton will be invoiced and accepted on gross weight at the time of delivery.

2—The government of the United Kingdom will supply to the Government of the United States, delivered on board ship at Singapore and, by agreement between the two governments, at other convenient ports, rubber in bales, of the grades which will be specified by the Government of the United States, to a value equivalent to that of the total value of the cotton to be supplied in accordance with paragraph 1 of this agreement. In determining such equivalent value, the rate of exchange between Straits Settlements dollars and United States dollars shall be deemed to be the average of the buying rate during the period January 1st-June 23rd, 1939, in the New York market, at noon, for cable transfers payable in Straits Settlements dollars, as certified by the Federal Reserve Bank to the Secretary of the United States Treasury and published in Treasury decisions.

Calculated on Average Price

(A) The quantity of rubber will be calculated upon the average market price, as published by the Department of Statistics in the Straits Settlements, for No. 1 ribbed smoked sheets, during the period January 1st-June 23rd, 1939, for spot delivery at Singapore plus 0.25 Straits Settlements cent per lb. for cost of baling and delivery on board ship, with adjustments in price for other grades according to differences quoted in that period.

(B) The rubber will be inspected and accepted by experts appointed by the United States Government. Any disputes will be settled in accordance with the normal custom of the trade.

(C) The rubber will be made available for inspection and acceptance by experts appointed by the Government of the United States during a period of six months beginning at a date to be agreed upon by the two governments, and such inspection and acceptance will be made within a reasonable time after the rubber is so made available. Delivery at the warehouse at the port of shipment with provision for free delivery on board ship will be made within a period of 15 days after inspection and acceptance, and storage and insurance charges will be borne by the government of the United Kingdom for a period of two weeks but no more after delivery at the warehouse at the port of shipment.

3. If either government should find that delivery in accordance with the arrangements specified in paragraphs 1 and 2 is likely to restrict supplies available to commercial markets unduly or to stimulate undue price increases, the two governments shall consult with a view to postponing delivery or taking other action in order to avoid or minimize such restriction of supplies or such price increases.

Will Be Stored for 7 Years

4. The intention of the United States Government and the government of the United Kingdom being to acquire reserves of cotton and rubber, respectively, against the contingency of a major war emergency, each government undertakes not to dispose of its stock (otherwise than for the purpose of replacing such stocks by equivalent quantities in so far as may be expedient for preventing deterioration) except in the event of such an emergency. If, however, either government should at any future date decide that the time has come to liquidate its stock of cotton or rubber, as the case may be, it may do so only after (a) consulting the other government as to the means to be employed for the disposal of such stock, and (b) taking all steps to avoid disturbance of the markets. In no case may either government dispose of such stocks, except in the case of a major war emergency, before a date seven years after the coming into force of this agreement.

5. The government of the United Kingdom will use their best endeavors to secure that the export is permitted under the international rubber regulation scheme of an amount of rubber approximately equivalent to the amount of rubber which would under normal operation of the scheme be released to meet current consumption needs.

6. Each government undertakes, in shipping to its own ports the stocks of cotton and rubber, respectively, provided for in this agreement, so far as may be possible to distribute the tonnage equally between the ships of the two countries, provided that the shipping space required is obtainable at reasonable rates. Consultation for the purpose of giving effect to this paragraph shall be between the board of trade and the maritime commission.

7. Should the United States Government, before the delivery is completed of the cotton provided for in paragraph 1 of this agreement, take any action which has the effect of an export subsidy, they will deliver to the government of the United Kingdom an additional quantity of cotton proportionate to the reduction in price below that provided for in paragraph 1 of this agreement caused by such action.

8. This agreement shall come into force on a date to be agreed between the two governments.

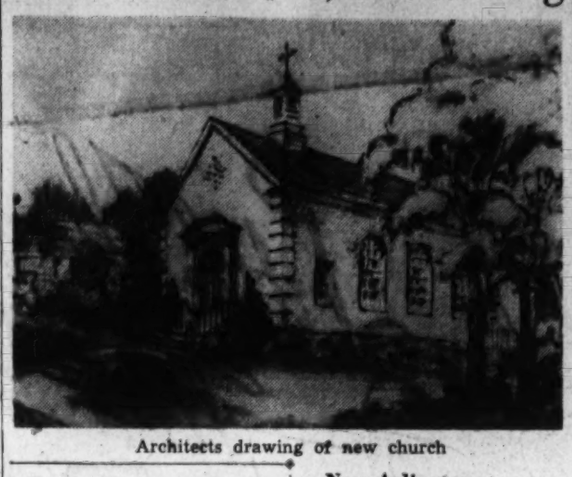
Vanderwerken Congregation Plans to Build $15,000 Building



Architects drawing of new church

New Arlington Structure to Be Rock Springs Church

Officials of Vanderwerken Congregational Church, Arlington County congregation, last night announced plans for construction of a new $15,000 church building.

Rev. Mr. Hunter

Expected to rise next year near the present site at Rock Spring and Little Falls roads, the new structure, to be known as the Rock Spring Congregational Church, will be of Colonial architecture and brick construction, and will embody features necessary to accommodate the growing congregation.

The Rev. Paul R. Hunter, who assumed the pastorate seven years ago, pointed out yesterday that plans call for use of the basement as a library, an expansion of the present library, already one of the most complete of its kind in the Washington area.

As a matter of fact, the library is such an adjunct to Vanderwerken, which serves as a neighborhood center, that a committee of 21 members, headed by Mrs. Barrett Schaeffer, is necessary to handle it. Modern fiction, political and economic works, a large selection of children's books and other volumes are contained in the unit, which will become a classroom with the advent of the new building. The library is open from 9:30 to 11 a. m. Sundays; Tuesdays, 3 to 5 p. m., and Fridays, 7 to 8:30 p. m.

The building committee includes Charles F. Suter, chairman; N. J. Jewett, Bennett King, J. L. Saegmuller, J. M. McHugh and W. A. Van Doren, jr. The latter leads the Boy Scout troop of the church. The library is named after Mrs. Charles W. Rohrer, wife of the present Sunday school superintendent, first charter member of the church to die.

C. F. Suter

Memorializing the late Rev. Franklin Noble, who served the congregation for many years, the Franklin Noble Bible Class is an important unit at Vanderwerken. Begun 15 years ago, many of its original members are still active, and many have married and formed the nucleus of the Couples Club, of whose program committee the pastor is chairman. The Rev. Mr. Hunter is teacher and Bennett King president of the class.

Eight of the charter members of the church, organized in 1912, who are still enthusiastic workers, are Mr. and Mrs. Nelson J. Jewett, Mr. and Mrs. Walter W. Burns, Charles W. Rohrer, Mrs. Maude Goll, Mrs. A. R. Tracy and Mrs. H. C. Hunter, the latter no relation to the minister.

Mrs. Van Doren

Among the most dependable supporters of the library and the church in general is the Ladies Guild, of which the leader is Mrs. William Van Doren, jr. It aids the church financially and has a welfare committee working in close co-operation with the county welfare department.

Vanderwerken Church is an associate parish of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, whose former pastor, Dr. Russell J. Clinchy, initiated joint fellowship functions and other units.

The church is the first charge of the Rev. Mr. Hunter, who is a graduate of New Brunswick Seminary, N. J., and Union Theological Seminary, New York City. He and Mrs. Hunter and their two children, Leonore, 6, and Mary Boyd, 3, reside at 2239 North Vernon street, Arlington.

Christian Science Topic

"Christian Science" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Sunday school is at 11 a. m.

The Golden Text is from Isaiah 49:13: "Sing, O heavens; and be joyful, O earth; and break forth into singing, O mountains; for the Lord hath comforted his people, and will have mercy upon his afflicted."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Verily, verily I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do he shall do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father." (John 14:12.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Through Christian Science, religion and medicine are inspired with a diviner nature and essence; fresh pinions are given to faith and understanding, and thoughts acquaint themselves intelligently with God."

Little Stories about GREAT HYMNS

"AMERICA THE BEAUTIFUL"
*Katherine Lee Bates
"O beautiful for spacious skies,
For amber waves of grain,
For purple mountain majesties
America! America!
God shed His grace on thee
And crown thy good with brotherhood
From sea to shining sea!"
*Inspired by a tour across the United States in 1893, Miss Katherine Lee Bates, professor of English at Wellesley College, penned this beautiful patriotic hymn. On the summit of Pike's Peak where spacious skies and amber plains are visible for miles around, she wrote the opening lines and completed the hymn soon afterwards at Colorado Springs.

The Road To Baltimore

For a community with a tremendous amount of incoming and outgoing motor traffic, Washington suffers from peculiarly inadequate approaches. North, south, east and west, there is not one really modern highway connecting the District with neighboring cities or resorts.

This situation is productive of endless inconvenience for motorists entering or leaving Washington, particularly during the summer week-end period. What is more important, it is responsible for an excessive highway fatality rate. This is particularly true of the highway connecting Washington and Baltimore.

In November, 1937, the Maryland State Planning Commission pointed out that the Baltimore-Washington boulevard was carrying more than 10,000 cars daily, and up to a danger point of 30,000 on peak days. Since then this traffic has steadily increased. Yet no constructive steps to meet the Baltimore-Washington traffic problem have been taken. The result is that the boulevard is, mile for mile, one of the most hazardous in the country.

The need for additional and more modern arteries connecting the Capital with the Maryland metropolis has long been recognized by the Maryland State Planning Commission. In its 1937 report, the commission recommended that earliest consideration be given to the construction of a Baltimore-Washington four-lane divided parkway, to supplement the existing traffic artery between the two cities. The ultimate construction of a Southeastern express freeway, mainly for commercial traffic between the Baltimore area and the Washington zone was also recommended.

At its June meeting, this week, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission took up the parkway proposal. Funds are already on hand for the purchase of right of way as far as Bladensburg and land purchases as far as the National Agricultural Research center near Berwyn, Md., have been authorized.

The project, which requires the cooperation of the Maryland as well as the Federal authorities, should be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible. With each passing day the highway traffic situation between these two great cities becomes more and more intolerable.

Eating To Live

Critics of the American social system frequently call attention to the tragic economic paradox whereby our farmers must watch their surplus produce rot for lack of markets while millions of children are being permanently injured by inadequate diets. On the other hand, there are those who point out that the expenditure of the average American household for food is greatly above the average for any European country.

That these facts are not at all contradictory is demonstrated by Prof. Jennie I. Rowntree, of the Home Economics Department of the University of Washington, in a study of the food problem just published as a Public Affairs Committee pamphlet.

Dr. Rowntree points out, what should be obvious enough, that the more expensive diet is not necessarily superior. The test is not the cost, nor even the quantity of provender, but "the condition of the people after generations on the same food." The French, as she shows, eat far less meat than we but get more protein by eating twice as much bread. Cheese is also much cheaper than meat. The Swiss eat three times as much cheese as we do.

Dr. Rowntree does not advocate any radical change in American food habits, but merely a combination of familiar foods so as to obtain the maximum of benefit from them. It is not only the poor who suffer from inadequate diets. Some of the worst cases of undernourishment, in fact, are found among children of well-to-do faddists "who make eating a task instead of a pleasure."

Thus it will be seen that the food problem is as much an educational as an economic problem. Dr. Rowntree by no means neglects such factors as lopsided distribution of purchasing power, or the unconscionable spread between farm prices and retail prices. It is interesting though to note that her remedy is not in the direction of more uniformity, but in that of more diversity of dishes, and a return to traditional ones. She wants people "to make the most of local foods," to eat "fish on the seacoast, potatoes where they grow, beans again making New England famous, and chicken and corn bread in the South."

It sounds very sensible. Perhaps Boston may once again become "the home of the bean and the cod;" but somehow we doubt that it will ever be possible for the traveler to find leg of milk-fed Long Island duckling at Ozone Park or breast of Philadelphia capon on Chestnut street.

Another Splurge

Toward the end of the session, when a weary Congress will find it the more difficult to examine the implications involved, the President tosses into the legislative pot a grandiose pump-priming scheme involving governmental expenditures of $3,060,000,000. This without inclusion of an $800,000,000 extension of the borrowing power of the United States Housing Authority, discussed elsewhere on this page today.

The excuse seized upon for making this proposal, vaguely foreshadowed for some weeks, is Senator Byrnes' inquiry as to the President's attitude on the $125,000,000 earmarked for PWA in the relief bill as passed by the House last week. Mr. Roosevelt shows clearly that he does not like this modest endeavor to combine public works and relief. He believes "there is a better way to accomplish the laudable purposes of this bill." The "better way" is the spending program now advocated.

The program, as sketched by the President in his letter to Senator Byrnes, has six parts, each one of which deserves, and must receive from Congress, the closest scrutiny. If this is given, sharp modification of the plan may be expected.

For non-Federal public works an expenditure of $350,000,000 over two years is suggested. There is certainly scope for development of this sort in most American municipalities, although the PWA has already filled many of the obvious needs. It is much more dubious that new projects under this heading will prove, as the President optimistically suggests, "self-liquidating."

This is even less likely with the second classification, road building. While the national highway system is still susceptible of broad improvement, such construction is very unlikely to pay for itself. Toll roads and bridges might do so, but these are anathema to Congress.

The third part of the program anticipates governmental purchase of $500,000,000 worth of rail equipment over three years, to be leased or sold to the carriers. As a matter of policy this step would be open to grave doubts even if the RFC did not already possess authority to lend money to the railroads for equipment purchases.

The fourth category, of expanded rural electrification, seems subject to less criticism. Possibly the same is true of the proposal to expedite farm-tenant purchases through the Farm Security Administration. It does seem questionable, however, that $500,000,000 can be spent constructively in this way in two years if security of the loans, and consequent repayment, is regarded as important.

The sixth and last part of the proposed program is perhaps the most subject to criticism. It suggests $500,000,000 to be spent in two years in extending governmental loans to foreign countries "for the purpose of promoting our foreign trade."

Such loans, current examples indicate, would probably be much more political than economic. They should never be considered as part of a "recovery program." And the amount suggested is wholly out of the picture in view of the fact that this Congress has already limited the Export-Import Bank to a $100,000,000 outlay for loans of this type.

In balance it is impossible to regard this program as "self-liquidating." If half of the proposed advances were returned to the Treasury the Government could consider itself lucky. It is as a spending program, as a heavy addition to current deficit financing, that the plan must be considered.

Once bit, twice shy. Undoubtedly the $870,000,000 extra fillip asked for the next fiscal year would be achieving some temporary reemployment next summer, as the Presidential campaign gets into full swing. But skepticism is wholly in order as regards any fundamental and permanent improvement from this further development of the merry game of playing ducks and drakes with public funds.

What The Deuce!

It is not altogether clear why the French bridge players who are planning to contribute an airplane to the nation out of their winnings want to call their gift the "Ace of Hearts."

After all, it is fairly easy to win a trick with so high a card. But it takes real skill and daring to make a successful play with a lower card. Why not, then, call the plane the "Deuce of Clubs" and thus show France's defiance of Field Marshal Goering's war birds?

If, on the other hand, the bridge players wish to have their contribution named after the safest, most sure-fire card in the pack, why not dub it the "Ace of Spades?" Then, again, if they dig deeply enough into their pockets "Grand Slam" should be the fitting appellation.

But why limit this patriotic gesture to French bridge addicts? How about the poker players of La Republique? Certainly their patriotism is also beyond cavil. The possibilities of naming the planes they might contribute are endless. Offhand we can think of "Straight Flush," "Full House," "Deuces Wild" and, perhaps, "Fifth Ace" because the latter is a dangerous card to be caught with.

The Monte Carlo addicts, if they wish to be subtle, might call theirs "Rubicon," in memory of the spot where the die was cast. However, the funds for all these potential additions to the French air force have not yet been collected. The title of even the first is only temporary. So the players can cross that bridge when, and if, they come to it.

A New Housing Plan?

President Roosevelt's comments on the USHA bill, made in connection with his new lending-for-recovery program, leaves the future of the slum-clearance and low-rent housing movement in confusion. Apparently the President does not view the proposed extension of the United States Housing Authority's lending powers as an integral part of his plan to stimulate self-liquidating projects. Yet he seems to contemplate a notable shift in the policy the USHA has been following.

The Senate passed the bill, extending the borrowing and lending powers of the USHA by $800,000,000, on the assumption that it would permit continuation of the slum-replacement work now well under way. According to the President, however, houses to be built under the new authorization would be rented to families in the intermediate salary brackets. Projects thus far aided by the Housing Authority will be strictly reserved for families in the low-income group, with heavy subsidies supplementing the rentals they are able to pay.

If the projects contemplated under the second phase of the housing program are to be in any respect self-liquidating, rents will have to be sharply increased. At present the USHA lends money to local housing authorities. But it also grants them annual subsidies amounting to more than is necessary to repay these loans with interest. That practice puts the Government's slum-reclamation activities outside the category of self-liquidating projects.

It is scarcely to be anticipated that the housing developments which the President has in mind would be self-supporting. But he did indicate that he was thinking of lower subsidies than are now granted by the USHA. Apparently he, like many other citizens, realizes that the job of wiping out the Nation's disgraceful slums can not be completed unless the Government's outlay per family benefited is substantially reduced.

In his letter to Senator Byrnes, however, the President says nothing of lower subsidies or of building for families of moderate incomes. He simply renewed his approval of the USHA bill. If the plan he discussed briefly with newspaper men is to become effective, amendments to the bill will doubtless be needed. And the $45,000,000 it would make available for "annual contributions" could be substantially reduced.

The President's desire to make USHA projects more nearly self-supporting is all to the good. If the object of slum-reclamation is retained, the great social advantages of the public housing movement need not be sacrificed as subsidies are reduced. Indeed, lower costs per family benefited should permit the housing movement to extend much further than it has any prospect of doing under present USHA policies.

But Congress ought to understand what changes are contemplated and to write them into the revised act. There has been far too much law-making on the sight-unseen basis in recent years. Before the House passes the USHA bill it may properly ask the President fully to explain his plan so that the measure may be modified in accord with it.

Senator Bridges says President Roosevelt is no more a Democrat than "Popeye." We had been thinking Popeye was a typical Democrat—he'll fight anybody anywhere any time about anything.

Laws' A Mercy!

From the Commentator

In Kansas it is forbidden to eat snakes or scorpions.

Pennsylvania can punish very heavily anyone who breaks a beer barrel. And the firing of a cannon for wedding celebrations is punishable by hard labor.

There is still a law nominally in force in the State of Virginia which compels railway companies to provide for a man walking with a lantern in front of a train traveling at night.

In Idaho shooting game from an electric train while traveling through the city is a crime. In Connecticut public parks persons of different sexes must sit at least 8 inches from one another. (This law is violated nightly.) Another regulation forbids newspaper editors to publish more than a certain amount of news about murders and bloodshed.

Of all the United States' million-odd laws, only 30 per cent are actually enforced.

Flags And Patriotism

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: I note in your issue of June 17 that Col. James A. Moss has called The Post to account for disrespect to the Stars and Stripes. The offense, which in due time if the flag worshipers have their way may be punishable by electrocution, was in showing the national banner on the right side of an illustration instead of on the left side.

We hear a great deal of talk these days about democracy and the rule of the people. What about the rule of the people with reference to the so-called flag code?

A little pressure group, not long ago, shoved through Congress a bill to make "The Star-Spangled Banner" the national anthem. Experts agree that this music is not suitable for popular use. The song contains the egotistic claim that all the bravery of the world resides in the United States, and it has now become necessary to delete a part of the rough language of the piece that offends British ears. There is no good reason why this big country couldn't have a dozen national anthems. But that would interfere with the program of the flag worshipers.

Our national banner is no more sacred or divine than the Great Seal of the United States. Each serves a useful purpose, but the Almighty had nothing to do with either. There is no occasion for treating them differently in public esteem.

A flag has nothing whatever to do with patriotism. It is most commonly used throughout the world, by the Hitlers, Stalins and Mussolinis, to stir up the undisciplined emotions of morons and lead them to death in fruitless wars. The flag worshipers in the United States draw from exactly the same source as the German who cries, "Heil, Hitler!" Their work is unpatriotic, un-American, dictatorial, a build-up for fascism, a menace to our most cherished institutions.

Uninfluenced Truth

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With reference to the diminishing of crime and to the means of promoting the general welfare of the young, I note that a Police Court judge, undoubtedly with the best of intentions, stated that the time to strike is when youth is ready to be molded into adult, etc.

But, being molded is properly used only with reference to inanimate things, like cement or jelly. Most certainly, with reference to the human mind, is not that the exact attitude of the Nazis, the Fascists and the Communists? And surely not to be thought of with reference to the youth of America!

In America we speak of educating (leading out) the mind of youth, giving it the opportunity to grow and develop (unfold) into the best possible type of which it is capable, no one knowing beforehand whether that unfolding may produce an Einstein, a Paderewski, or just plain John Jones, who has found a worthy though humble place in this work-a-day world.

We read of the child Jesus, that at the age of 12 he was found by his parents in the temple disputing with the doctors and asking them questions, his fresh young mind, unhampered by conventions or pressure of influence, eagerly seeking the truth. If we are Christians, then Christ should be our example; and if we do not want our country to come under the power of some false "ism," we would be wise to open to our young people the gates of Truth, not qualified truth, hampered by tradition or wishful interpretation, but, rather, The Truth, which we are promised will set us free.

The Jefferson Memorial Contest

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read in The Post of June 21 the statement on behalf of the Sculptors' Guild with regard to the Jefferson Memorial competition.

The first stage of this competition, open to all, scheduled to close June 30, calls for the receipt of applications (to be considered by a professional jury), accompanied by lists and photographs of previously executed work.

Apparently some younger sculptors fear that this requirement makes it useless for them to apply; they apparently assume that no one would have a chance who has not a long and imposing list of previous commissions on public monuments. Now that is not the idea. Obviously, a recent art student who can only list and show one or two studio works done under instruction would not have very much chance of convincing a jury of his capacity to execute a large public commission.

But there is today in America a great body of sculptors, whether academic or independent, who have ample technical capacity and responsibility, so that these factors, once established, are no longer the sole or most important ground of judgment in a matter of this sort. There must be very few American sculptors of any competence who have not in recent years had at least one public commission which would permit some judgment of his professional responsibility.

Clearly the most important grounds of judgment are the merits of the works themselves. Here we must depend on the ability of the jury. Our commission feels very fortunate in having secured the services in this capacity of Mr. Henri Marceau, Mr. James Earle Fraser and Mr. Heinz Warneke, who have so kindly agreed to serve as the jurors. These are gifted, able, experienced, fair and reasonable men, who ought to be able to recognize ability shown in works by a sculptor in any material, whether the bulk of his works are works sold or unsold, commissioned or not.

I write this as my personal opinion, for the members of the jury itself will not be fettered in their action in any way. Their own standing would seem to be the best guarantee of intelligent and impartial action.

In further regard to the jurors, I may say that none of them has ever had any previous connection whatever with the Jefferson Memorial Commission. As regards Mr. Marceau, he was chosen by our commission solely because of his very excellent work in conducting for the Fairmount Park Art Association the competition and selection of sculptors for the Phillips Samuel Memorial in Philadelphia, of which it could by no means be said that any favoritism was exercised.

Let me say further, that we should not have taken so much trouble to invite each of the members of the Sculptors' Guild to compete if they were not to receive a full and fair consideration.

Had our commission predetermined the result, we need not have held any competition at all, as it was entirely within our power to make direct selection of a sculptor in the first place. I assure you that our only desire is to secure the best possible monument in the most impartial and unprejudiced manner.

Chairman, Committee on Sculpture, Jefferson Memorial Commission.

Neutrality

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Neutrality must mean, for us, one of two things: either serving, on the whole, our natural friends among the nations—and getting paid well for it—or serving, on the whole, our natural enemies, without pay! I would prefer immeasurably that we supply, with profit, war materials to those nations which are struggling for the things for which we also are struggling, rather than that we forego the sale of all such supplies and forego the profits thereof, all for the benefit of those nations which openly declare themselves to be the enemies of democracy.

Never in the history of our Nation has there been such opportunity as will come to us, in the event of another world war, to profit so greatly by doing the right thing by our friends and by our own democratic ideals. There is neither sin nor foolishness in helping our friends nor in honestly profiting by doing so. The sinful profits are those traitorous profits derived from selling war supplies to our enemies and to the enemies of world democracy. Japan will never forgive us for helping her conquer our democratic sister, China! Such nations forgive nothing save their own crushing defeat! They kiss only the rod that destroys them!

Wants More Coughlins

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read the letter to you in The Post of June 21, signed by Julius Davidson, in which he raves about Father Coughlin's activities in his efforts to save this country from the clutches of the Communists.

What we need, instead of tempering Father Coughlin's voice or shutting it off, is more Father Coughlins and less Ernest Lindleys, Jay Franklins, Leon Hendersons, Ben Cohens, Tom Corcorans, etc. We all know that Father Coughlin has been cut off the radio in the great free city of Washington, D. C., and that the newspapers never publish anything he says. But there are other cities in the United States, not the seat of Government, which are not quite so dictatorial.

If there was a brawl in Jersey City at which Norman Thomas was holding a civil liberties (?) rally, at which some of Father Coughlin's friends made trouble, what was Norman Thomas doing in that rally? No doubt he was doing his best to overthrow this Government in some style of his own. We are rather asleep while Communists get the high places in our Government, but some of us, and Father Coughlin is one of them, are aware of what is going on.

The Post Impressionist

The Terrace

YOU KNOW how The Terrace is on a hot summer evening—a brilliant pageant, a kaleidoscope slowly revolving beneath the blue sky, whose colored pieces of glass are people dancing to the music from an orchestra in white on a little dais before the swimming pool. Behind and above the lights of The Terrace the hotel looms, an enormous bulk reached by steps from lesser terraces, and on whose balconies people sit looking down upon The Terrace.

Away from The Terrace toward the dark trees of the park stretch grassy lawns, and from the trees beyond the grass little night winds—if there is moving air at all in Washington—cross The Terrace to swing against the colored lights in potted trees, to brush the petunias in flower boxes and to make the guests remember.

"I love this," the girl said seating herself in the chair the waiter held, "because it's exactly like a play."

George agreed that it was.

"Now let's see if the curtain's gone up," she said.

They sipped their drinks and left their table to dance on the crowded circle of floor. The music had that soft quality music assumes when played out of doors. The dancers moved languidly in the hot summer night. It was an old scene, the same scene that has been played since people learned to dance, a scene of light and color and gaiety, of people amusing themselves after a long day, of drama being played out at the circular tables ringing the floor or among the people dancing. And yet it was a new scene, too, of gaiety and of drama, new because it was occurring now.

A young man in a white dinner jacket got up and made his way between the tables onto the floor. George and the girl watched him cut in on a tall girl with a long blond bob and with smooth, even features and beautiful teeth. There was a little flurry of excitement among the three and George, who was making a game of it with his partner, said:

"Let's stick around and watch."

"And listen!" his partner said laughing.

They saw the blond girl throw back her head and laugh and they even heard one of the men call her name. As they danced away, George said:

"Now we know her name and what she looks like and not another thing in the world about her."

"Ships that pass in the night," his partner said.

At a table near the edge of the floor a woman whose name and face both were once known throughout the world sat talking quietly with her husband. George remembered her from her photographs, from the time when he was in school and thought her the most beautiful woman whose picture he had ever seen. Dancing by her table he remembered when she had once played Lady Hamilton, waiting heroically for Lord Nelson to win at Trafalgar.

It seemed impossible that this could be the same person, this woman who sat there so quietly, idly watching the dancers who passed her table. What did she think, watching the world go by? She appeared serene, too young in appearance to be the woman he remembered. Life obviously had treated her well. George caught the fleeting impression that she had no regrets.

"We know her name, too," he said.

"Yes," the girl with whom he was dancing answered. She was very famous. The blonde never will be. But what difference does it make? I say let people have what they want—it's all the same in the end."

When the floor show was over the orchestra went off for a little intermission and a girl with an accordion moved between the tables playing the pieces people asked her to play. From where they sat George and the girl watched the girl with the accordion sit down at the table of a bald-headed man and a red-headed girl.

The accordionist played "The Blue Danube" and the bald-headed man swayed toward the red-headed girl. The people close to his table laughed. The bald man grinned and beat his fingers on the edge of the table. George's partner laughed softly to herself.

"Another of life's little dramas," she observed. "Oh, well, it's human nature and human nature is and always will be the same the world over. Personally, I like it."

"Who doesn't?"

Waltzes, fox trots, tangoes, the rumba. The kaleidoscope moved on. Visitors in town, politicians, socialites, stenographers, the athletic, the lazy, white collar workers, the bored, the eager, the famous, the obscure, the young, the old. The Terrace draws them all. In the complexion of its cosmopolitan patrons The Terrace is as American as Coca-Cola.

"You know I like this place," the girl said to George, "for three separate reasons."

"Which are——?"

"Which are because it gets a marvelous breeze, because it makes me feel romantic and because in a world that changes too rapidly it goes on year after year always the same. It's to Washington what the Long Bar used to be in Shanghai and what, fortunately, the Cafe de la Paix still is to Paris."

Young Fords Need Liberty

By Mark Sullivan

The Best Policy

I HAD INTENDED to write about the new $3,000,000,000 public works proposal, and I started for the President's press conference, to hear what he might have to say about it. But I forgot that the morning press conferences came on the half-hour, at 10:30, not 10. So as I walked up the elm-shaded drive that leads to the White House executive entrance, and observed no other newspapermen yet converging, I realized I was early.

However, at the executive office door there was some slight stir. A car of a radio chain was drawn up to take sound records. Young men bustled about with a manner of subdued eagerness. As I entered the door I heard a young woman of the White House staff give a message to the young men. The message came from one of the President's secretaries, Mr. Early. Mr. Early sent word that Mr. Roosevelt was busy, but that in a few minutes it would be all right.

I asked one of the secret service men what was afoot. He said it was about Henry Ford's 27-millionth car; the car was parked outside. The President was going to sign a "log-book," which Mr. Ford's young men were carrying about as a record of the car's travels—the travels being designed, as this call at the White House was, to acquaint the world with the fact that Mr. Ford has made a very large number of motor cars. I was witnessing an incident of that function of the Presidency which consists of contributing occasionally to the mechanisms, highly developed in the modern world, that call public attention to worthy institutions and enterprises.

27 Million Cars Eat Up Parking Space

I WAS INTRODUCED to those in charge of the car, and they asked me to sign the log-book. Mr. Ford's courteous and discriminating young men had me sign in a space adjoining that which, they assured me, would be occupied by the President's signature. Thereby I was assured of a minute place in history, in the voluminous annals which Mr. Ford is going to preserve for posterity in the museum he is assembling at Dearborn, Mich.

The young men acquainted me with entertaining information. If Mr. Ford's 27,000,000 cars were placed end to end, they would reach 79,000 miles, more than three times around the earth. If all were parked together, the parking space would consume 9 square miles. These statistics, I imagine, must have been repeated by Mr. Ford's young men quite often. But so animated was their zeal in making the world familiar with the Ford car, that they were able to repeat their computations with the zest of Copernicus announcing the discovery of astronomy.

They had shown their anniversary car at the San Francisco Fair. Then they had driven it across the continent—by a route which fortuitously took them through State capitals, and enabled them to call upon governors, thus happily conferring public attention upon both the governors and Mr. Ford's car. Then they took the anniversary car to the New York World's Fair, where, the young men said with much pride, the car had been photographed by 10,000 amateur photographers. After their call at the White House, they were going to take the car back to the San Francisco Fair. That there are two fairs in the year of Mr. Ford's 27-millionth car is a coincidence happy for publicity.

The 1893 Prophets Were Plenty Wrong

THIS SMALL INCIDENT in the day's work of a President, and of a writer, hardly, I suppose, justifies a column. But it interested me, and I wanted to write about it. As I reflected upon what relation it might have to cosmos and the more weighty topics of the day, it occurred to me that the greatest of America's fairs was the one held at Chicago 46 years ago. At that Chicago World's Fair in 1893 was no 27-millionth car, nor first car. There was, at that time, some talk, chiefly humorous and derogatory, about a possible "horseless carriage."

The year of the World's Fair at Chicago was in the bottom of the depression of the 1890's, a depression more serious than the one now with us at its present stage. Among the psychological factors that contributed to the gloom of the depression of the 90's was the assurance, dogmatically given out by various pundits, that America could never again have abundant prosperity; that America could never again find work for all its unemployed—because, so the pundits said, machinery and invention had reached and passed its golden age. Nothing was left to invent or create that would make use of much labor. Our railroad building had been practically completed; and never again would there be another invention, like the railroads, which had provided abundant employment.

Those 1893 prophets of a permanent body of unemployed have heirs and successors in our present depression, as everybody knows.

Young Henry Fords Need Freedom

AS IT HAPPENS, it was in 1893 that Mr. Henry Ford was making his tiny beginning in a little one-room factory. It was he, and thousands of other Henry Fords in scores of lines of industry, who defeated the 1893 prophets of permanent unemployment. True, a hundred Henry Fords failed to one who succeeded; but the failures made contributions to economic enrichment, as well as the successes.

And today, one way out of our present depression is to rely upon the present generation of young Henry Fords. To give them freedom to function and expand, to free them from hampering restrictions and regulations, might be a better policy of government than a $3,000,000,000 public works program.

Books And Things—Dr. Freud

Psychoanalysis Is Used to Explain Jewish Monotheism

By Isabel Paterson.

THE COBBLER holds that there's nothing like leather. Dr. Sigmund Freud, the proponent of psychoanalysis, finds that his famous system is pertinent to "Moses and Monotheism" (Knopf, $3). Here, indeed psychoanalysis is called in to discover the nature of religion as such, to account for the development of monotheism as the special doctrine of the Hebrew people and to explain the persistently recurrent historical phenomenon of anti-Semitism.

This is a considerable load for any theory to carry; and to make it do so Dr. Freud is obliged to offer some conjecture as history. Thus he really turns the process of proof upside down; he takes the correctness of the theory for granted and then calls upon it to validate the history he assumes. The first paragraph of the book takes this position as follows:

"To deny a people the man whom it praises as the greatest of its sons is not a deed to be undertaken light-heartedly . . . No consideration, however, will move me to set aside truth."

The "truth" in question is that Moses, the statesman who established the Jews as a nation, was not one of them, but an Egyptian.

HOWEVER, it is at least an interesting thesis, skillfully set forth. The name of Moses Dr. Freud explains, is distinctively Egyptian, actually a suffix, meaning "child," and used with some other word (perhaps with votive or protective intention), to signify, for example in Rameses, "Ra-Mose," Ra (the deity) has given a child. Of course this special reading implies that the children of Israel never borrowed any Egyptian names, customs, or beliefs, even temporarily, during their long sojourn in Egypt. Perhaps they did not. In any event, the story of Moses has some resemblance to a typical hero myth found in the beginnings of many national histories. It is that of a child born of noble or royal parents, but in adverse circumstances, and exposed to extreme danger at the instance of his father, but preserved by humble instrumentalities; in maturity he recovers his heritage and "wreaks vengeance on his father." The tale of Oedipus is clearly indicated of prime significance in psychoanalysis. But the Oedipus legend is a late version. Sargon, King of Agade, is an earlier type.

And the history of Moses in part reverses the typical narrative. Moses was said to have been born of a captive people and rescued by a princess of the dominant race. Why, Dr. Freud inquires, was there this unique reversal in the legend?

Circumstances required it, he replies. Moses, though an Egyptian, did represent deposed royalty; it is assumed that he had accepted the monotheistic creed of the Pharaoh Ikhnaton, who tried to abolish the Egyptian polytheism. Monotheism, Dr. Freud suggests, was a natural corollary of the exaltation of the Pharaoh himself to autocratic power above the community. But Ikhnaton's effort failed to fix the new religion; the Egyptians relapsed. Yet some Egyptians presumably did not revert. Moses is assumed to have been one such, and of noble birth, but in disfavor for his creed. To maintain it, he must convert a new people to it. He became the leader of the Hebrews.

THEY ALSO fell away from monotheism for a time after the death of Moses. But it was still associated with their deliverance, and so was the leadership of Moses. Dr. Freud assumes that Moses was actually killed in a revolt of the people. Regretting this later, they denied it, and to secure the unifying effect of a national hero, they revised the legend, making him one of themselves, and reviving his religious doctrine as their peculiar heritage. This process Dr. Freud describes in psychoanalytic terms as a "traumatic neurosis," finally resolved by a "delayed effect."

The psychoanalytical explanation given of anti-Semitism is even more complex in its interactions of the feeling of "guilt" attributed to all humanity from earliest times as a result of revolt against primitive patriarchal rule, the sons against their father, younger generations against the authority of their elders. And a sense of guilt leads to accusation of others as much as to penitence—an "ambivalence" of emotion.

It is not considered here whether any minority or nonconformist class or group is not persecuted in troubled times as a simple irrational outlet for anger by violence. Custom is second nature; whatever is "different" is suspect by animate creatures, because they do not know what it will do next. The reversion, evidenced by persecution mania, might be found to go much further back than human society or memory, to the level of the brute kind, though "rationalized" by an abuse of human language, a crime against reason. Men are capable of knowing better; hence their behavior is horrible when they fail to act as human beings.

DR. FREUD offers the hypothetical conclusion that the highest "standard" is "the Super-Ego," and "the higher achievement, is what is more difficult to attain, and man's pride in it is only Narcissism."

These fragments of a human being, the Ego, the Id and the Super-Ego, remind one of the legendary martyr who carried his own severed head under his arm—it is the first step which counts. Who or what is adding up the scattered items and affirming "the truth"? A purely secular theory of human behavior always labors under the difficulty of explaining away its own vocabulary, and Dr. Freud must still speak of "progress in spirituality" and maintain that a man should speak the truth as he sees it, whatever the cost.

Youth Betrayed?

IF THE MEMBERS of the American generation in which I have lived were required to give an account of their stewardship most of them would have to report that they had no idea until just lately that they, personally, had some obligation to preserve the sacred heritage, improve the country and hand it over in first-class condition, complete with inventory, to the next generation. That is something that was sprung on us within the last few years.

However, it is doubtful that we would have done otherwise than we did even if we had been notified of this responsibility on being initiated into the human race. Nobody gave us any inventory or accounting, and the country certainly was not in A-1 shape when we arrived, but we figured, if we gave the matter any thought at all, that those who had preceded us probably did the best they could.

THE ROADS were in terrible shape, telephones were rare and automobiles were so unreliable that nobody had much faith in them, and so expensive that the common people didn't even aspire to own them. We inherited slums, and every year great numbers of children would be swept off in epidemics of smallpox, scarlet fever and diphtheria. There was plenty of typhoid, too, and those residents of some Southern cities who could afford to travel would leave home to escape the yellow jack when it broke out.

These plagues have been almost abolished in the time of our generation, and, although we still do have slums, I believe a comparison, if one could be made, would show that the evil has not increased by any measuring standard. Our predecessors did not leave us much modern plumbing; gas light was something of a luxury; an electric light was a novelty. An awful lot of families were still using kerosene lamps.

I think many of the habitats which now are deplored as slums are not much worse than some which were regarded as rather comfortable, decent homes, then. A lot depends on the people themselves.

AS TO EDUCATION, it says in the book that the number of regular college students has risen from 168,000 to 1,028,000 in a little less than 40 years, and that figure, of course, bespeaks a corresponding increase in enrollments in the lower schools. The improvement in the medical service has kept pace, too, and if it still is not always possible to jab a button and find an ambulance at the door, free, to rush the patient off to a free hospital for a free operation, how do you think things were when we were born—most of us at home and many of us on the kitchen table?

Well, the people turned back William Jennings Bryan three times—not in my generation exactly, but a little before—and Bryan is now being built up as a great liberal, which is something I won't argue here. But each generation has the right to elect or reject the Presidential nominee according to its judgment, and Bryan went down because the people didn't want him. Long afterward Bryan tried to send a man to prison for teaching a scientific theory and used his prestige and the trusting faith which some people still reposed in him to earn $50,000 a year as capper for an inflated real estate development in Florida during the boom. It is no cinch, therefore, that the people who rejected Bryan made a mistake. Maybe they had his number.

DURING PART of its life my generation had a pretty good time enjoying good times. Many and many a Saturday afternoon in the fall we topped $500,000 at the gate of a football game, and we ran up a score of $4,545,000 for two ten-round fights between Tunney and Dempsey—but wages were high and money was loose then. Anyway, the people weren't studying economics. They were studying the scores and the stock market, and a great many of them didn't even vote in the elections.

But, after all, that crash dates back to the time we went liberal twice-running and elected Woodrow Wilson and lost our shirt in the war.

I would like to know what the oncoming generation, the one which is now being talked up as youth, is going to do with this country in its turn. Tear down the slums, no doubt, to provide more and more free services and subsidies and recreations, but what about the dear old sacred heritage of liberty?

I am not overconfident, remembering that thousands of them in the University of Baton Rouge, who hadn't the excuse of ignorance, sold out to Huey Long for band music and free train rides, like dollar-a-vote floatees, when he was abolishing every guarantee provided by the United States Constitution. That is how much youth cared for the sacred heritage in one test case. Much right have they to talk to us about betrayal!

The Pact Of Ankara

By Barnet Nover

Turkey Joins Up With France

THE VIOLENT attacks being made on Turkey in the press of Italy show that the Rome government is not underestimating the importance of Turkey's action in allying herself with Great Britain and France.

As gatekeeper of the passageway between the Black Sea and the Mediterranean, Turkey occupies a position of the utmost strategic importance. Had she cast in her lot with the Berlin-Rome axis or, alternatively, decided to remain strictly neutral as between the two great European camps, Great Britain and France would have been very seriously handicapped in their efforts to form an anti-aggression bloc.

WITH TURKEY as their ally, however, the European democracies can afford to breathe a little more easily. Their southeastern flank is now fully protected. The threat to the Suez Canal and to communication in the eastern Mediterranean from the direction of the Dodecanese Islands, which Italy has transformed into important seaplane and submarine bases, has been reduced. And Great Britain and France can now provide direct aid to Rumania should that country be made the victim of an aggression.

Turkey's alliance with Great Britain, supplemented yesterday by an alliance with France, may also have a decisive bearing on the outcome of the prolonged and thus far inconclusive negotiations for an Anglo-Russian alliance. Since 1920 Turkey and the Soviet Union have been allies, despite profound differences in general outlook and political philosophy.

TURKEY joined the Anglo-French bloc for the same reason that impelled Great Britain to abandon her historic policy of abstaining from commitments in eastern Europe and for the same reason that moved Greece and Rumania in accepting a British guarantee of their security.

Turkey was Germany's ally during the World War. From the viewpoint of the Turks that proved a most unprofitable arrangement since it led to their nation's defeat and to the destruction of the Ottoman empire.

Not all the blandishments of Franz von Papen, whom the Nazi government hastily sent to Ankara, nor tempting offers of trade concessions, could persuade the Turks to restore the wartime link with the Reich.

On the other hand, Italy's action in laying heavy hands on Albania's independence, thus bringing the Fascist kingdom within striking distance of the Dardanelles, and her earlier action in fortifying the Dodecanese Islands, which are in uncomfortable proximity to the Anatolian Peninsula, made Turkey fearful of her security.

THE ALLIANCE with Great Britain, concluded on May 12, and yesterday's pact with France were thus motivated by the instinct of self-defense.

Yet in the negotiations leading up to the inclusion of Turkey in the antiaggression bloc, it was Great Britain and France which were the suitors, Turkey the nation that was courted. Turkey has not hesitated to capitalize that fact.

It was just a year ago, in an effort to win Turkey's good will, that France agreed to give Turkey a foothold in the strategically valuable sanjak of Alexandretta.

Until last year the sanjak (Turkish for district) was under French rule, or, to be more technical, was part of the French mandate of Syria. The region is in the northeastern corner of the Mediterranean, at the point where the Turkish and Syrian borders join. It is of great strategic importance if only because the Port of Alexandretta is one of the finest natural harbors in the eastern Mediterranean.

FOR THIS REASON alone it took some pressure to get France to transform the sanjak into something resembling a Franco-Turkish condominium, with Turkish and French troops jointly occupying the region and with Turkey having a good deal to say regarding its administration. But strategic factors alone do not entirely explain French reluctance to give way to Turkey on the Alexandretta question.

There are a great many Turks in the sanjak of Hatay, as the Turks call it. But they form only a majority of a very mixed population which also includes Syrians, Kurds, Armenians, Circassians, Iranians and some Europeans. And under the League mandate, which France holds for Syria, France was responsible for the protection of the rights of these minorities.

There was still another reason for French reluctance to modify the status of the sanjak of Alexandretta and especially to cede that valuable area to Turkey. In her dispute with Italy, France has taken the position that she will under no circumstances cede an inch of territory to the Fascist kingdom. She was thus fearful of setting a precedent that might plague her in subsequent dealings with Italy.

NONETHELESS France has now ceded to Turkey the former sanjak of Alexandretta which during the past year has been known as the Republic of Hatay. She has found it necessary to appease an ally in order to avoid having to appease an enemy. She tried the latter course and it resulted only in trouble.

At any rate if the price of Turkish friendship has come high the French—and the British—feel it is worth it. They realize what it meant to have Turkey on the enemy side. They are determined not to have that happen again.

TURKEY is now definitely on their side. But for the first time since the Ottoman empire was overthrown, a region not wholly Turkish has been added to the Turkish domain. Moreover, Turkey is now in a position to extend her influence over more specifically non-Turkish regions.

She may not want to do so. Under the late Kemal Ataturk, Turkey showed no inclination to seek the restoration of the old Ottoman empire. She sought to build a national state in Anatolia alone.

Under Kemal's successors the same wisdom may be displayed. Of this there can be no certainty. Should there some day be a revival at Ankara and Istanbul of the old dream of empire, the former sanjak of Alexandretta could prove a useful stepping stone. Thus yesterday's Pact of Ankara, with the cession of Hatay as a corollary, may prove to have a long-range importance transcending its significance as a factor in the present European crisis.

The Once Over

The Blue Book and the Blue Marlin

"Mrs. Henry Sears, of Greenwich and Cat Cay, Bahamas, is shown beside her 730-pound blue marlin, which she landed for a new world record for women anglers. At the right is Mrs. Paul Sanborn, who previously held the record with a 560-pound marlin."—Underlines of a newspaper photograph.

Woman's place would appear to be beside a blue marlin. It is getting so you can't look over the fishing news without discovering that some members of the weaker (?) sex has landed another giant fish. It makes men anglers ashamed, and how the marlins feel about it will never be known.

But they look bluer than usual.

There was a time when, if you saw a giant swordfish, tuna or marlin hoisted on a dock, you knew it had been taken after a long and stirring battle by some husky male. Judging from the photographs prominently displayed today, these monsters of the deep are being taken almost exclusively by charming society women, who look just as unrumpled and fresh as if they had done nothing more arduous than change the water in the goldfish bowl.

Admittedly such fishing pictures are more appealing, and they add glamour to angling, but they puzzle old-time fishermen, and they certainly embarrass the big fish. There is always a peculiar expression of resignation on blue marlin taken by the ladies. And why not? What is there for a 700-pound marlin to live for once he realizes he is on the loser's end of a battle with a 135-pound society girl?

There is something suspicious about it all. Is it a fair fight? Or are marlin susceptible to charm and beauty? Is it possible that marlin are awed by contact with high society? Is a blue marlin a pushover for the blue book?

At any rate, something has got to be done. Already it is a little difficult for a girl to get anywhere socially if she has had no marlin in her life.

The society columns will presently read like this:

Mrs. T. Weems Ossleburt is giving a tea at the Ritz Thursday. Mrs. Ossleburt was the runner-up in the blue marlin tournament off Cat Cay in 1935.

Mr. and Mrs. Jarvis Gloss Pertwee announce the engagement of their daughter, Angelina, to Howard Zouk. Angelina is the one who took three sailfish in one afternoon last winter.

Miss Gloria Thronkle-Thronkle, of Park avenue, whose coming-out party was to be held last evening, has had it postponed indefinitely as she is at the moment playing an 800-pound marlin somewhere off Bimini.

A Buddy Goes

("George Conway, trainer of War Admiral, died on the day War Admiral was being retired."—News item.)

The "Admiral" comes slowly up the road
Upon the farm so green where he was born;
He halts as if he'd heard a bugle blow . . .
What is it that he seems to sense this morn?

Something has happened; now the Admiral
Is conscious of it as he paws the ground . . .
He searches forms and faces in the group
And knows that one he loved is not around.

He goes into his stall, his head now low;
No more will bugles call him to the post . . .
But hark! He hears one blowing from afar:
It calls the trainer that he loved the most.

Congress Asked To Permit Minors To Act in District

The District Commissioners yesterday asked Congress to pass legislation permitting minors under 18 years of age to act on local stages and appear in musical productions.

Under the plan suggested, the Board of Education or an agency specified by it would issue work permits after parents and guardians had shown that education of the children would not suffer.

Such a proposal met defeat two years ago. Under the present law, girls under 18 and boys under 16 are prohibited from work after 7 p. m., and boys between 16 and 18 after 10 p. m. Children under 14 are barred from any paid work, other than sale and distribution of newspapers and domestic and agricultural pursuits.

Explorers Find Birds' Mating Eden

West Palm Beach, Fla., June 23 (U.P.).—First news of the success of a scientific expedition, headed by Richard Archbold, of San Diego, Calif., into remote sections of Australia and Africa was heard yesterday in a 9,000-mile radio conversation with the party's base camp.

H. G. Nicholson, radio operator at the Humboldt Bay, Dutch New Guiana, base camp, reported that the expedition had made the first pictures ever taken of the "playground of birds of paradise," annual meeting of the brilliantly-plumed fowl for a three-day mating season.

Sen. Lodge Elected Harvard Overseer

Special Dispatch to The Post

Scientists Seek To Set Off Atoms Like Firecrackers

Princeton, N. J., June 23 (AP).—The world's largest mass of a radioactive element has been put to use at Columbia University, New York, in an effort to solve the problem of generation of atomic power.

One quarter of a ton of uranium, heaviest of all the elements, which breaks down to form radium, is being bombarded with neutrons—small particles of atoms which have no electrical charge—to find out whether a chain of atoms can be made to explode like a string of fire-crackers.

Dr. Merle Tuve, physicist of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, told the American Physical Society today that the Columbia scientists had succeeded in producing 10 per cent more "fissions," or division of the nuclei of uranium, than ever before by enclosing the large mass within walls of water and manganese.

Russian Mate Of U.S. Engineer Coming 'Home'

Mrs. Tamara Ruzanski, of Baku, Russia, will have a new automobile waiting for her when she comes "home" to the United States.

Her husband, Edmund Ruzanski, Detroit automobile engineer, who has been fighting four years for permission for his Russian-born wife to join him, said yesterday he had received word that Soviet authorities had approved her petition to renounce Russian citizenship.

The couple met and were married while Ruzanski, an American World War veteran, was working in Russia. In the last four years he carried his appeal for aid in bringing his wife to America to members of Congress and the State Department.

It may take one to six months for Mrs. Ruzanski to obtain final permission to leave the country, her husband said, but when she gets to Detroit she will find the new car, and "it will be all hers."

Baltimore Quakes As Fun-Seeking Shriners Arrive

Baltimore, June 23 (AP).—Fez-topped shriners, set for a week of fun-making, began moving into Baltimore today and more timid-hearted Baltimoreans began thinking of moving out.

The Monumental City's downtown business district was festooned with flags, bunting and shrine insignia, and palm trees blossomed where once were lamp posts.

Unofficial reports said about 2,000 nobles had arrived today, although fewer than that number had registered. By Tuesday, when the convention formally opens, officials expect 100,000 shriners, their wives, and guests to be on hand.

Indicative of the strain on accommodations here, Aladdin Temple, of Columbus, Ohio, will remain at a hotel in Washington; Al Koran, of Cleveland, Orak, of Hammond, Ind., and Sphinx, of Hartford, Conn., will share dormitories in a State normal school.

Patent Lawyer On Probation for Defying Officers

B. Alexander Singer, patent lawyer, was placed on six-month probation by Justice Adkins yesterday for defying two internal revenue agents who sought to seize his automobile for taxes.

Justice Adkins granted the clemency after he was told Singer had paid the $5,000 in back taxes which caused the dispute.

Assistant District Attorney Heflin prosecuted Singer in a two-day trial in which the Government claimed the lawyer received from $9,000 to $25,000 a year as Washington representative of a prominent law firm.

Morris Will Sit In District Court

The District Court will reach its full complement of 12 justices Monday when James W. Morris leaves his post as Assistant Attorney General to take his place on the District bench.

Chief Justice Wheat will administer the oath at 1:30 p. m. The new justice then will don his robes in open court and hold a reception.

Attorney General Murphy, District Attorney Pine, the justices of the Court of Appeals and a number of members of Congress are expected to attend the installation.

Church of England Book on Marriage Called 'Shameless'

London, June 23 (AP).—A book compiled by the Church of England's Moral Welfare Council on Marriage Relations was assailed as "shameless" yesterday before the church council which reserved judgment to read the volume.

Canon E. T. Kirby, of Manchester, attacked the book as "about the most filthy and disgusting thing ever I have seen."

Dr. George Lawrence Russell, who wrote the chapter singled out for the severest condemnation said, "I tried to get over the disastrous separation between the spiritual and the physical."

"The physical side is important and I had to deal with plain facts in a straightforward manner," he said. "I could not deal with marriage as if it were purely a spiritual relationship."

Denmark Is Sending M. Wadsted to Rome

Successor at Legation Here Will Be Henrik de Kauffmann, Now Minister at Oslo, Whose Wife Is Admiral's Daughter

Though Washington society is accustomed to the comings and goings of diplomats, everybody who knows the Danish Minister, Otto Wadsted, will be sorry to learn that he has been transferred from the Capital. The popular envoy, whose striking resemblance to our President has often been noted, is about to take himself off to Rome, where he will represent his country as Minister.

His successor has already been appointed by the foreign office in Copenhagen. He is Henrik de Kauffmann, now serving as Minister at Oslo, Norway, and, Washington society will be interested to learn, is married to an American. Mme. de Kauffmann is the daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. William Dugald MacDougall, of 2101 Connecticut avenue.

Expected here late in the summer—although the date of their arrival have not yet been set—M. and Mme. de Kauffmann will be accompanied by their two daughters. This will be the Minister's first Washington post, though he has been in this country before, having served with the New York consulate many years ago.

M. de Kauffmann has held other distinguished posts all over the world. Peiping, Tokyo and Bangkok are only a few of the cities in wnich he has served. He has been at Oslo for the past seven years.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. MacDougall are not in Washington at present, having leased their apartment here. They have been traveling abroad of late and are now the guests of Mason Sears, in Dedham, Mass., suburb of Boston.

Arrived Here Eight Years Ago

It was eight years ago that Minister Wadsted first arrived to represent Denmark as envoy to this country. One of his very first posts, after a tour of duty in the foreign office, was New York, where he gained his early experience of the United States. Later M. Wadsted served as consul in San Francisco. Since then he has learned more about this country than most Americans ever know, having made numerous trips back and forth across the country.

The retiring minister has also served in every corner of the globe. He has represented his country as Minister to the Argentine, and has worked in Paris, Berlin, Australia and New Zealand.

Mme. Wadsted, who is a South American by birth, is petite, blonde, and one of the most chic of the diplomatic hostesses. The couple have a little son, Otto, who is the apple of his father's eye, and who, though less than 6 years old, has already crossed the ocean several times.

This attractive little family was much in the limelight early this spring, when the Crown Prince Frederik and Crown Princess Ingrid of Denmark arrived for a tour of the United States. The Minister met them in California and traveled across the country with the royal pair, accompanying them to Hyde Park, where they spent the night, and visiting the World's Fair with them. He and Mme. Wadsted gave a dinner and a reception in their honor while the Crown Prince and Crown Princess were in Washington.

The Minister's talent for diplomacy was well illustrated by a little happening at the reception. It was a broiling hot day, and noticing that the Crown Prince looked as though he would like to mop his brow, a newspaper reporter asked him if royal tours weren't a bit tiring. Prince Frederik replied fervently, "Exhausting," whereupon the Minister, who had overheard, stepped up and said diplomatically, "But it's been all too wonderful—our whole trip couldn't have been better."

To Remain Here A Few More Weeks

The transfer of M. Wadsted has for the moment changed the plans of the Counselor of the Legation, Wilhelm Eickoff, who had expected to sail shortly for a vacation in Denmark. Now M. Eickhoff will wait to see when M. de Kauffmann is to arrrive before booking passage. The retiring Minister and Mme. Wadsted will not sail until late in July or early in August, and will be in Washington until they depart.

The past year has seen several diplomatic couples transferred from Washington. The next to go are the retiring British Envoy and Lady Lindsay who now are busy supervising the packing of objects accumulated during their nine years' residence in Washington. The exact date of their departure, however, has not been set.

Eero Jarnefelt, who for several years served as Finnish Minister here, was, like M. Wadsted, transferred to Rome several months ago. The recall of Manuel Trucco, Chilean Ambassador, was another diplomatic change which his many friends in the Capital regretted, and another diplomat replaced this winter was Italian Ambassador Fulvio Suvich, whose successor is Prince Colonna. The departure of the loyalist envoy from Spain Fernando de los Rios, and his replacement by Franco's agent, Juan de Cardenas, was another major diplomatic change of the past season.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

OF WIDE INTEREST in the hunt country is the announcement by Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Harrison, of Leesburg, Va., of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Janet Fauntleroy Harrison, to Bertram C. Harrison, of New Jersey. The future bride met her fiance on a visit to her brother, Lieut. Charles F. Harrison, at Fort Clarke, Tex., from which she has just returned. Mr. Harrison is stationed at nearby Randolph Field, San Antonio, Tex.

ONE OF VIRGINIA'S noted beauties, Miss Harrison, was graduated from the Holton-Arms School in Washington and made her debut there two seasons ago. One of the largest parties in Virginia that year was the Christmas ball given for her by her aunt, Mrs. E. B. White, at her home, Selma, in Leesburg.

Miss Harrison is descended from prominent Virginia families. Her great-great-grandfather was Levin Powell, who built Llangollen, now owned by John Hay Whitney. She is also descended from Thomas Lee, builder of Stratford, ancestral home of Gen. Robert E. Lee.

MR. HARRISON is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin George Harrison, of New Jersey. He attended Riverside Military Academy in Georgia and was graduated from West Point in 1938. He is now enrolled in the Air Force Flying School, Kelly Field, Tex. The wedding will take place when he has finished his course there. Mr. Harrison will fly to Virginia later in the summer, when many parties will be given for the couple.

MISS GEORGIA HERBERT, of Columbia, S. C., is visiting Mrs. Hill Beverley at Selby, The Plains. Miss Herbert will be graduated next year from Sweet Briar College. After commencement there this month she attended the balls at V. M. I., and later a house party given in her honor by Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Wellford at Sabine Hall on the Rappahannock River. Others at the house party were Miss Elizabeth Turner, of The Plains; Miss Sally Warren, of Warrenton; Miss Frances Wellford, of Richmond; Armistead Wellford, jr., Dan Wellford and Charles Whitaker.

MR. AND MRS. James McMann left this week for New York to attend the wedding there today of their daughter, Miss Jessica Thayer McMann, to Matthias Hayes, son of the late Nicholas Hayes, of New York. Only the immediate families will be present at the ceremony, which will take place in the rectory of the Church of St. Ignatius Loyola. After a brief honeymoon the couple will come to Middleburg to visit her parents. Mr. Hayes is an aviator and his bride has been studying dramatics and doing radio work in New York for the past year.

Younger Set Throngs McLean Farewell Party

Friendship Estate Ablaze With Lights as 190 Attend Fete in Honor of Daughter, Evalyn; Two to Leave for Bar Harbor Summer Home

Friendship, the estate of Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, chalked up another in its long list of successful parties last night, when the owner of the famous Hope diamond entertained at one of the merriest dinner dances of the season.

The estate—where Presidents have golfed and actresses dined—was a twinkle with lights as sleek limousines wound up the gravel drive to deposite their chic passengers.

Although Evalyn, the hostess' daughter, demurred at having the party given in her honor, virtually all of the 190 guests were "younger set." Guests were seated at small tables for ten—abloom with early summer flowers. Occupying two of the tables were friends of Mrs. McLean's.

Mrs. McLean had chosen a smartly cut black frock, a foil for the blazing jewel hanging from its diamond necklace. In a filmy bouffant gown of white, willowy Evalyn, jr., received with her mother.

A fifteen-piece orchestra provided music for dancing, which took place in the long enclosed verandah and drawing room. The swimming pool in the garden was strung with many colored lanterns and a great many youngsters took advantage of the refreshing water. Guests spilled out onto the spacious gardens where a corps of strolling musicians were on hand to entertain them.

'Jock' McLeans Down From New York

Mr. and Mrs. "Jock" McLean, son and daughter-in-law of Mrs. McLean, were down from New York for the party, as were a number of attractive young men. Among those from out-of-town were Samuel Piza, Bayard Stockton, Edward Reeves, Jerome Zerbe, Sam Colt and John Colt, all of New York City.

To name the guests would be to run through the list of Washington's "smart set." Escorted by Arthur Vandenberg, son of Senator and Mrs. Vandenberg, of Michigan, Miss Eleanor Flood made a pretty picture as she whirled about the floor in her sky-blue chiffon frock.

Miss Eleanor Meem, whose sister Ann is Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, of Colorado Springs, had chosen a clinging white jersey frock for the occasion.

Party in Nature Of Farewell

Others seen were Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson, Mrs. Randall Hagner and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Short, Miss Stellita Stapleton, escorted by Samuel Biddle and wearing a green organdy frock, hand painted, with two enormous orchids; Miss Emily Davis, Mr. and Mrs. F. Moran McConihe and the latter's brother, Alexander Hagner; Miss Peggy Townsend, in a flowered print, gray and red; Mrs. Rogers Barker, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Sullivan, jr., Miss Ruth Dove, Miss Austine McDonnell, up from Warrenton for the event, and staying with Miss Townsend, and, among the extra men, Thomas Krock, George Wheeler, James Mitchell, John Galliher and Middleton Train.

Mrs. McLean's party last night was in the nature of a farewell, for she hopes to leave, with Evalyn, for Bar Harbor, Me., next week, where they will remain all summer.

Mrs. Stotesbury To Reside Here

Mrs. Edward Stotesbury, widow of the Philadelphia financier and mother-in-law of Doris Duke Cromwell, has decided to abandon Whitemarsh Hall, her 145-room home near the Quaker City, in favor of Washington. It is reported that she has leased the former home of the late Raymond Baker from his daughter, Mrs. T. M. Godde, of London, who, by a strange coincidence was a former wife of James Cromwell, Mrs. Stotesbury's son.

The house, a handsome white stone residence in the French style, is at 2300 Foxhall road, near the home of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, United States Minister to Norway. It was occupied two years ago by Mr. and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis. Mrs. Stotesbury is understood to have decided to sell Whitemarsh Hall, and is expected in Washington in September.

The late Mr. Baker was formerly director of the mint and was a close friend of President Wilson.

Ailing Mother Needs Married Daughter's Care; But Husband Says She Must Choose Between Them

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married nearly five years, but my husband has such set ways that I can't say the marriage has been a happy one. In fact, I have often thought that if I so desired I could get a divorce on grounds of mental cruelty. About eight months ago, my mother had a nervous breakdown, so serious that she had to be hospitalized. Prior to her illness, she had been what one could truly call an excellent mother-in-law.

While she was in the hospital, my brother, with whom she had been living, broke up housekeeping. About a month ago she was dismissed from the hospital and I had her come home to me (we have an apartment). I think she would have been very despondent at this particular time if she hadn't been able to live with one of the children.

My husband has been very unreasonable in his attitude toward her. He has said that if she doesn't leave, he will. It is really heartbreaking to see her pitiful attempts to please him. The whole situation has nervously exhausted me. I don't feel that I can stand the strain much longer. My husband has not said anything to mother, but I believe his actions make her feel unwanted. And in his presence I find myself feeling almost afraid to be pleasant to her.

She cannot live with either my brother or sister, because they are rooming. They are willing, however, to pay me for her board and keep. I can't understand my husband's objections. They can't be financial, as I pay more than my share of the household expenses, since my salary is three times as much as his. What must I do in a case of this kind? Please let me know at once, as my husband has given me until the last of June to find some other place for her to stay. Do you think it worthwhile to find a room for my mother in order to keep a husband like mine? If you do think so, what reason could I give my mother for making her leave us? Sincerely,

F. W.

The Ethical Choice

DEAR F. W.: In my opinion, the monstrous selfishness your husband is displaying in this emergency gives you the measure of the man—a man so devoid of decent sensibilities as to be unfit to live with. Since he has seen fit to issue—with such brutal and arrogant self-assurance—an ultimatum to the effect that you must choose, as of June 30, between your mother and him—i. e., either she goes or he goes—I think you would be richly justified in choosing your mother and letting him go, without one moment's hesitation.

This, obviously, is no routine "mother-in-law problem." It is a problem of an altogether different sort, involving a central figure whose pathetic need of the moment would make an instantaneous appeal to the sympathies of any normally responsive human spirit. It seems to me that only a person diabolically deprived of fellow-feeling would deny (when financially well able to provide) creature care and kindly solicitude to an elderly, ailing, homeless next-of-kin who had just been discharged from a hospital after a serious illness.

It would be another matter if your mother had been nursed entirely back to health; if she had been convalescent under your roof for six months, say, or perhaps a year. But the fact that your husband is impatiently eager to kick her virtually into the streets before the hospital pallor has left her cheeks gives one to wonder how you have borne his probably comparable cruelty to you during the past five years. In view of the fact that he can be so inhumanely inconsiderate of her, in her present extremity, one wonders how much more considerate he would be of you, supposing you were to lose your income or to become, through illness, wholly dependent upon him for support.

I daresay one doesn't have to look far to find the reason why he has given you so much as "house room" during the past five years. I think that reason may be found in the fact that your income is three times as large as his; coupled with the fact that, out of that income, you pay more than half the household expenses. He finds in you a financial convenience, as well, perhaps, as a whipping boy for his cruelly temperamental vagaries. Having asserted himself for five years as your overbearing lord and master, he has no slightest intention of sharing your cowering ministrations with anyone else. No, indeed. Off with the heads of any who would claim the spotlight with him!

The time has come, it seems to me, for him to learn through painful experience that whoever picks up the sword shall perish by it. Since he is bent on a showdown, let him have it. Let HIM pay the price of his intolerable arrogance, his callous inhumanity. You cannot afford to. For entirely aside from the fact that, in doing his brutal will, you might be dealing a mortal blow to your mother, there is the equally serious consideration of what you would be doing to your own mind and soul in turning traitor to fundamental decency of behavior, merely to oblige a petty tyrant. Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Rolling Exercises, Quick Ways to Slim Hips To Be Streamlined They Must Measure Only 1 or 2 Inches Larger Than Bust

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE to have a beautiful figure with hips out of proportion to the other measurements. Hips that are only 1 or 2 inches larger than the bust are called straight hips and the figure is streamlined; 3 inches larger is average; 4 inches larger, full hips. But if your hips measure more than 4 inches larger, I'm afraid they would be called heavy;

Since the hips not only tend to spread outward but also to take on fat pads, rolling is the ideal way of slimming this measurement. Rolling will give you both a smaller measurement and a smoother hipline. Begin now, before the hot weather really sizzles in, and you will be able to look trim—even without a girdle!

Straight Roll Is First

Let's start off with straight rolling.

POSITION: Lying on the back on the floor, legs extended straight down, arms folded over the chest.

MOVEMENT: Roll across the buttocks and over to one side. Then roll back and over to the other side. Roll for 15 counts, relax, then continue for 15 more counts. Later you can work up to 100—and you will, too, if you are in earnest about slimming the hips.

The next is a rocking-chair roll.

POSITION: Sitting on the floor and turned to rest weight mainly on left side. Keep the legs straight out to form a right angle with the hips throughout the rocking-chair roll.

MOVEMENT: Rock backward, bringing feet straight up in air. As you go backward the pressure should be brought to bear on the fat pad on the back and side of the left hip. Try to rock forward to the original sitting position, rocking across the same fat pads. Then rock backward across the right side. Gradually work up to 25 counts for each side.

Improvement Is Quick

The third roll is somewhat more complicated as to position.

POSITION: On the floor on the back, but half-sitting, so that weight rests on arms and elbows, and have the knees flexed, with feet off the floor and tucked up near the buttocks.

MOVEMENT: Roll from side to side across the derriere, bringing alternate thighs right down on the floor. Continue for 50 counts, resting between each 10.

You will find that by bringing the weight to bear on these out-of-the way fat pads you can make the most amazing improvement in your figure in a short span of time.

Bright Prints Distracting in Handkerchiefs

Bloch Freres, in Paris, Burmel, an American, Doing Original Work

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor

BRIGHTLY printed handkerchiefs never have been more distracting than they are this season. But if you're bored stiff with patterned flowers and abstractions, here are a few of the more ingenious ideas from a celebrated maker of dainty hand-blocked kerchiefs. Bloch Freres, exclusive kerchief makers to Paris couturiers, is the old designing family that invented these novel creations.

MARSHALL ADAMS

First, the Blochs borrowed from their native haunts. Versailles inspired a half dozen hand-woven handkerchiefs, all four of whose corners are blocked with the picturesque vistas, the expensively manicured gardens and fountains from an extravagant past. The same design method of combining scenic and floral arrangements in artful (but never hard poster-ish outlines) is also achieved in Bloch Freres' quaint "Corners of Paris" series. Splashed in color across these fine French handkerchiefs is the Left Bank, with its bookstalls and a glimpse of Notre Dame. There also are the Place du Theatre, gay, bold Montmartre and the quiet corners of the Pont Neuf, as well as sidewalk cafes and picturesque flower carts.

French Travel Scene

True to the Franchman's love of culture, the artistic Blochs have brought the Louvre back to life on squares of beautifully hand-rolled linen. Their group of French masters utilizes medallions from such painters as Millet, Corot, Watteau and Lancret with corner motifs of each fellow's work . . . Perhaps if you once took a honeymoon or vacation through the French provinces you loved best the Loire, with its ancient bridges and chateaux. Their imprint is yours through Bloch Freres "Countryside Prints," which show peasant scenes of Normandy, the Brittany coast and dazzling spots along the Riviera.

But the French don't own all squatter rights on handkerchief designing. Burmel, an able American, has started many native style leaders on a new hobby. They are now collecting, not postage stamps or milk glass, but handkerchiefs marked with "Americana."

As patriotic as the national anthem are Burmel's grafic handkerchief sets of American scenes, printed on sheerest Irish linen, hand-rolled and tinted in colors that range from turquoise to red earth and fuchsia. Among these sets Mark Twain's Mississippi rolls on and on, the Pilgrims' land, George Washington and Mount Vernon merge and the covered wagon jogs on in a vivid tableau against quaint American floral borders.

Student Textile Designers Turn To Nationalism

Students in textile design at Cooper Union in New York are discarding stereotyped European influences and are turning to subject matter "genuinely American," according to Mrs. Addison Lamar, instructor.

"The spirit of nationalism is coming to play a commanding role in the field as a whole," Mrs. Lamar pointed out. "The wealth of material to be found in American life and culture has too long been ignored in favor of set formulas dictated by Paris and other European art centers."

Scenes depicting the Gibson girls riding in hansom cabs in New York City, and robust picturizations of the Chicago stockyards, cowboys, and river life on the Mississippi are among the American motifs employed by Cooper Union students. Other sketches are based on symbols of the Old South, including hanging moss, unque gateways and doorways and plantation life.

John Barrymore's Daughter to Make Stage Debut

New York, June 23.

THE OLD saw to the effect that "blood will tell" is often a phony, but for some reason it nearly always seems to be true when said blood courses through the arteries of an actor. That is why I'm so fascinated by the fact that pretty Diana Barrymore Blythe, eldest child of the fabulous John, makes her professional stage debut Monday night in the ingenue leading role of "You Can't Take It With You" at Ogunquit, Me.

ALICE HUGHES

Diana is pretty, but no beauty. She hasn't her colorful father's beautiful nose—as a matter of fact, the girl looks more like her mother, now Mrs. Harrison Tweed, and her famous aunt, Ethel, than she does like her pop. Diana, from early girlhood, seemed earmarked for the theater which has been adorned by her father, her Aunt Ethel, her Uncle Lionel and her grand old great-uncle, John Drew. Her first finishing-school play came when she was 14, and later she studied at that cradle of baby thespians, the American Academy of Dramatic Art.

The general idea here is that Barbara Hutton and So Forth sailed back to Europe in a sad state—that she regrets bitterly being talked out of her American citizenship, and that she wants to come back home to live. Well, Barbara, just you be a little more careful about your marriages after this.

Very welcome visitor—Lela Rogers, mother of Ginger, who is living on Central Park West, and letting her precious chick go it alone in Hollywood. Some woman, is Lela . . .

The Check-up

"Say, have you met that Mr. Van Pash?"

"Yes! He took me to dinner the other night."

"I had cocktails with him today. He's terribly interesting."

"Yes. He's a very unusual man. He tells me he does a lot of soap modeling."

"He was telling me about it, too. He wants to make a head study of me."

"He does of me, too! He says I have a very Grecian head."

"That's what he told me!"

"I guess he's traveled a lot. He was telling me about spending a year on a South Sea Island——"

"Was that the one where the queen of a native tribe fell for him?"

"Oh, did he tell you about that, too?"

"Yes, and about working in a Canadian logging camp——"

"And having the fight with the overseer and knocking him cold——"

"Oh, and did he tell you about the time he shipped on a transport to South America?"

"Yes, and about getting lost in the Andes!"

"I suppose he's had a lot of adventures. Still—he's a sort of poetic type, don't you think? I know he wants us to get together and read Cyrano de Bergerac——"

"Oh, he said he was going to bring it over and read it to me!"

"He told me I was just letting my brain go to waste. That I really ought to do something—write or act or paint——"

"He wanted to map out a course of reading for me."

"He did me, too!"

"I wonder if he's ever been married?"

"I don't think so. The first thing he said to me when I met him was that I reminded him of his first sweetheart."

"He did? Why, he told me that, too!"

"I suppose he has quite a line. He told me what he noticed about me first was my throat. He said it was the first thing that attracted him in a woman."

"He told me he always looked at a woman's eyes first."

"Well, he certainly has a line! Still, I like him. You know why? He's different. He really appreciates women's finer feelings."

"I know. He told me he didn't think women ought ever to have to wear themselves out with housekeeping."

"Oh, he told me that! He said he thought a woman had as much right as a man to cultivate her mind."

"Yes, I know. I guess from what he said he's no slave to convention."

"No. Still he thinks conventions are all right . . . for ordinary people."

"Yes, he told me that, too."

"He must be quite a psychologist. I know he told me a lot of things about myself——"

"Me, too! He says that fundamentally I'm not the career type——"

"He said I wasn't either. He said by nature I was really the dependent type who ought to get married and be protected."

"That's what he said to me! Oh yes, and he said that all this aloof, independent attitude of mine was just a pose——"

"That's virtually what he said to me. He said that essentially I was a man's woman."

"Me too! He said I just wore a mask over my true personality."

"That's the VERY thing he said to me! Say, did he say anything to you about being lonely?"

"Yes, he said that down deep in my heart I was really a very lonely person."

"He told me that very same thing!"

"Well, you know really that's true about me."

"It's true about me, too."

"Yes, and he said he was the type that was lonely down underneath——"

"He did! Say, did he say anything to you about a beefsteak?"

"Yes. He said he was very old-fashioned in his taste——"

"That's right! And that he didn't care for movies. Go on."

"And that he liked to spend quiet evenings at home——"

"Yes, and that he was going to come over some evening. Go on."

"And let me cook him a steak."

"You don't mean that he told you that, too!"

"He most certainly did!"

"Well, of all things!" Honestly, men are all alike!"

Improve Your Grammar

PUZZLED AND UNHAPPY, Alice watches Frank stroll past with Madge. "FRANK DON'T LIKE ME NO MORE," she sighs. "I wonder why he's ANGRY AT ME." If only Alice could hear herself as Frank hears her, she would know why she lost him.

Frank likes to squire girls whose speech is as well groomed as his own. Correct to say he "DOESN'T like me ANY MORE." And people aren't angry AT others, but angry WITH them.

A shame to spoil a good first impression with careless English. Yet how often it happens! A man is attracted by a girl's smart appearance—he would like to take her places but is ashamed to let his friends hear her crude speech.

Wise to take no chances, but to weed out errors—one by one—until your speech is charmingly correct. No danger then of grating on educated ears with "HE LEARNED me to play tennis." "I DIDN'T USE TO care." "I don't know AS I CAN."

You know, after checking on common English mistakes, learning right forms, that it's correct to say, "HE TAUGHT me." I NEVER USED TO care." I don't know THAT I can."

And of course you want to spice your talk with bright slang expressions like "Let's go places and do things." But some slang expressions are unacceptable to cultured people—phrases like "ain't it fierce?" "that guy," "the inside dope"—so check on those, weed them out, too.

Don't let poor speech spoil your good times. Our 40-page booklet, "Common Errors in English," points out mistakes you may not realize, tells how to correct them—cultivate the charming speech that helps you socially, in business.

Send 15c in coins for your booklet, "Common Errors in English," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Leaders Charge Townsend With Hitler Tactics

Delegates From Four Eastern States Revolt; Plan Rump Meeting

By the United Press.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 23.—Delegates representing four Eastern States tonight organized a revolt against the "dictatorship" of Dr. Francis E. Townsend, founder and leader of the Townsend $200-a-month old-age pension plan, and proposed a rump convention within a month.

The revolt resulted from refusal of the Fourth National Townsend convention to seat delegates from Covington, Ky., Jeannette, Pa., and other cities at the end of the second day of its session. Leaders of the uprising were officials of Townsend units in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Kentucky.

Disgruntled delegates charged Townsend ruled his organization with "Hitler" tactics, naming delegates to the convention, State directors and other officials of the movement himself. Those who protested against this policy, they said, were ejected from the organization or charters of their clubs revoked.

Leaders of the opposition were Judge Harvey H. Smith, of Covington; Frank S. Ruff, jr., and Dr. Roy Hoffman, of Jeannette; William H. Weir, jr., Pittsburgh, and the Rev. David J. Vint Laughland, of Rochester, N. Y.

They proposed Cincinnati, Pittsburgh or some city "farther east" as the site of the rump convention.

At a meeting of the insurgents today, the leaders charged that all the power in the organization rests in the hands of Townsend, his son, Robert, and a few assistants. Smith said he believed Townsend planned to throw his movement behind the Republican Party in the 1940 election.

Smith said this would tend to justify charges of Townsend plan critics that the movement is a "racket."

Loyal delegates, meanwhile, cheered wildly, waved small American flags and dug into shabby pockets and purses to pour a flood of greenbacks and coins onto the platform of Cadle Tabernacle to finance a $1,000,000 Nation-wide radio program to publicize the pension plan and rally supporters.

4 Congressmen Will Fly Atlantic

at Shadiac, New Brunswick, at 12:30 for an hour; at Botwood, Newfoundland, at 4:30 p. m. for an hour and a half, and at Foynes, Ireland, at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow for an hour before proceeding to the Southampton Terminal, where she is due at 1 p. m. (E. S. T.) tomorrow.

A number of Pan-American officials, among them Juan T. Trippe, Pan-American president, making his first transatlantic flight, will accompany the officials. Others include Col. Edgar Gorrell, president of the Air Transport Operators Association, as a Pan-American observer; J. Carroll Cone, Atlantic Division manager; John Steele, engineer, and Fred Laidlaw, mail expert.

Capt. Harold E. Gray, who piloted Pan-American's Yankee Clipper on its first transatlantic flight several weeks ago, and who has made six round trips since over the Atlantic—more than any other pilot—will command the Clipper, which will carry a crew of 12.

Launching of the Northern route service will inaugurate twice-a-week flights by Pan-American ships to Europe, one via the Southern route from Port Washington to the Azores, thence to Lisbon, Portugal, and Marseilles, France; the other over the Northern route to Southampton.

CAA Gives Blessing

The Civil Aeronautics Authority yesterday found Pan American Airways to be "properly and adequately equipped" to carry passengers across the Atlantic, and authorized the first transatlantic airplane passenger service in history.

Authorization was for the southern route to Marseilles, France, via the Azores and Lisbon. The first regular flight will leave Port Washington, N. Y., June 28, it was said.

At the same time, the authority authorized Pan American to transport property and mail to Southampton, England, by the northern route, via New Brunswick, Newfoundland and Ireland, and gave permission for the company to carry 22 Government officials across on this route today. After this flight, it was said, the CAA will consider issuance of a permit to carry passengers by the northern route.

France Grants Hatay to Turkey

Coinciding with the signing in Paris yesterday of a mutual assistance pact between Turkey and France was the announcement that the strategic Republic of Hatay (Syrian Alexandretta) had been formally ceded to Turkey. Map shows ceded territory, ruled by France under a League of Nations mandate

Mediterranean region, they would be ready to co-operate effectively and to give each other mutually all the aid and assistance in their power." The agreement was "not directed against any country" but designed to assure "aid and assistance" where necessary.

Bonnet, in a broadcast explanation, said the accord was "exactly the same as the British-Turkish declaration of May 12." Thus the Paris accord further extends the British-French front of nations to the far eastern end of the Mediterranean.

French Property Safeguarded

(Britain and France have given pledges to aid in the preservation of independence of or concluded mutual agreements with Poland, Greece, and Rumania and negotiations now are under way with Soviet Russia. They have, however, encountered considerable difficulty.)

In the ceremony at Ankara a definite treaty of cession gave to Turkey the Hatay republic, which formerly was the northern Syrian province known as the Sanjak of Alexandretta.

Turkey takes over Hatay but agrees to safeguard French property and interests there. Formal annexation was set for Sunday.

Citizens of the republic—which is approximately 10,000 square miles and has a population of 220,600—will have six months to choose Turkish, Syrian or Lebanese citizenship. Those choosing either of the latter two will have 18 months to leave Hatay and will have complete freedom to take out their personal belongings.

Neighbors Ask For Silence From Metal Plant Here

No noise would be good noise to E. N. Maxim, of 4835 Leland street, who, Thursday, took legal steps against the Columbia Specialty Co., makers of air-conditioning equipment, complaining that the nocturnal din of the concern's sheet metal plant was something less—or more—than a lullaby.

Maxim's silencer took the form of a warrant which he swore out before Justice of the Peace Ernest D. Houghton, of Bethesda. He was backed by several neighbors, all of whom live near the plant, which is on Bradley boulevard near Leland street. The case is tentatively set to be heard Tuesday before Trial Magistrate Ralph G. Shure, of Silver Spring.

Joseph Richards, company president, declared yesterday that it was necessary for the plant to work two shifts, the latter ending at about 10 or 11 p. m. He said he believed that the plant was well insulated to contain its own noise, however.

Meanwhile, the Columbia Co. employes decided they also would take a rest from the alleged noise, insulated or not, by holding their annual outing today at Nichols Farm, Ashton, Md. Games, athletic events and prizes will lead up to the climax of a chicken dinner.

Mrs. Thomas Is Named To Jury Commission

Announcement was made yesterday that Mrs. Eunice B. Thomas, of 4930 Seventh street northwest, had been named a member of the District jury commission, which chooses jurors for the District and Police courts.

Chief Justice Wheat announced that the justices had appointed Mrs. Thomas for three years to succeed Mrs. Ella Henderson West, whose term ended.

Germany to Get Wittkowitz Works

Prague, June 23 (AP).—The newspaper Narodni Politika reported yesterday the negotiations had been concluded in Paris by which Germany's Hermann Goering iron works would assume control of the famed Wittkowitz works, largest producer of steel and iron in the Nazi protectorate of Bohemia-Moravia.

The international Rothschild banking family formerly was interested in the Wittkowitz works.

Velma West's Kin Cleared in Tests By Lie Detector

Cleveland, Ohio, June 23 (INS).—The lie detector today cleared the mother and brother of Velma West, blonde hammer slayer of her husband, of any suspicion they might be aware of the woman's whereabouts since her escape last Monday from the Women's Reformatory at Marysville, Ohio.

Police Chief L. G. Corlett, of East Cleveland, said after both submitted to a test:

"They both have a perfect record of innocence of any advance knowledge of Velma's plans to escape or any knowledge of her whereabouts."

Says Reich Seeks Second Munich

Berlin, June 23 (AP).—Nazi Germany is playing for another Munich, but if she fails to get Danzig and the Polish corridor by negotiation as she got Sudetenland, one official said tonight, it then "will be just too bad for the Poles."

Repeated statements on German military might and the Nazi challenge to British interests throughout the world, of which the press is filled, are in the opinion of some watchful observers all a part of a diplomatic maneuver—which top ranking Nazis say they believe will end in capitulation by those who are trying to thwart German expansion.

Reports, from outside Germany, of German troop movements toward the Polish border and the Siegfried line facing France and of continued speculation as to zero hours, when the Nazis are supposed to be prepared to strike, are regarded as serving this build-up toward another crisis—for which the Nazis say they will in no wise be responsible.

Slovakia Decrees Racial Measures

Bratislava, Slovakia, June 23 (AP).—The Slovak government has ordered Jews to register their property and gave notice that all Jews must quit the army and air force immediately. D. C. Area Accidents Kill 2 Boys

One Dies as Auto Hits Tree, Other Runs Into Car; 4 Youths Injured

Two youths were killed last night and four were injured, two seriously, in two traffic accidents in the District area.

Harper Basil Roberts, of Elm street, Bethesda, Md., was killed instantly when the automobile in which he was riding crashed into a tree in Kensington road north of Chevy Chase Lake.

Russell Duvall, 15, of Glen Arden, Md., was injured fatally when, Prince Georges County police said, he ran into the side of an automobile in Landover road at Glen Arden. He died a few hours later at Casualty Hospital of a multiple skull fracture.

Those Injured

Injured in the crash which killed young Roberts were:

Curtis Walker, 18, of 11 West Lenox street, Chevy Chase, Md., fractured arm, and leg and scalp injuries.

Roy Gilfix, of Bethesda, Md., eye badly injured.

Thomas Lohn, 17, of Baltimore street, Kensington, undetermined injuries, not believed to be serious.

Billy Mann, 18, of Bethesda, undetermined injuries, not believed to be serious.

Gilfix was treated by a private physician at Kensington. The other three injured were taken to Georgetown Hospital.

Thirty persons attending the annual garden party at the Congregational Home, 1220 Crittenden street northwest, were endangered when an automobile, driven by a girl student, crashed through a hedge and careened down on the party.

Driven by Beginner

Police said the car, driven by a young woman who was being taught to drive, failed to make a turn at the intersection. According to witnesses, the girl's instructor grabbed the steering wheel and steered the car away from the crowd.

A nurse at the home said many of the elderly inmates were upset by the accident, some requiring treatment. The driver and her companion were treated at the Homeopathic Hospital for minor injuries.

Vivian Caylor, 13, of 1420 Staple street northeast, was treated at Casualty Hospital for injuries suffered when she was struck by a car while crossing at the intersection of Oates and Staples streets northeast.

Maurice J. Neitzy, 13, of Arlington, Va., escaped with minor cuts and bruises when he was knocked from his bicycle by a trailer truck. He was pedaling on Jefferson Davis highway at Twenty-third street when the accident occurred. He was treated at Emergency Hospital.

James H. Hall, colored, 16, was treated at Freedmen's Hospital after he was struck and knocked from his bicycle at Fourth and O streets northwest. He suffered brush burns to his hands and arms.

Two victims of a crash near Glen Echo sustained minor cuts. They gave their names as Tina Torregrossa, 21, of 3624 Eleventh street northwest; Mary Marcellino, 23, 728 Otis place northwest, and Fannie Cusimano, 23, 2619 Bladensburg road northeast.

Shortly after police had been notified by the parents of two boys that their sons were on the way to Florida without permission, both were brought to Georgetown Hospital with injuries sustained in an accident at Vienna, Va.

The boys, James Reeves, 18, of Brookmont, Md., and Everett Whalen, 16, of 726 Eleventh street southwest, were headed South in a second-hand car they purchased last week. Both were released from the hospital after treatment.

Ott, Ex-Deputy Marshal, Given 1-3 Years in Theft

Thomas E. Ott, former chief deputy United States marshal who admitted stealing more than $1,000 in valuables left with him as evidence, was refused mercy by Justice Laws yesterday and sentenced to one to three years in prison.

"When a man gets in a position of trust in the courts," said Justice Laws, "he must conduct himself so that the public will have reverence for that office. When the courts break down, it is a matter of grave concern." He added, "this is personally a matter of the greatest difficulty, but I must make it a deterrent for others."

Myron G. Erlich, Ott's attorney, pleaded with the court that from the time Ott served with the Army in France and was wounded, until after he entered the marshal's office, he was guilty of no misconduct.

'Jitterbug' (Army Style) Wars On River Pests (Water Chestnuts)

Underwater Mower With Duck-Foot Paddles Waving in Air Earns Its Name; Only One of Many Methods Used to Halt Plant

A new-fangled contraption—termed a "jitterbug"—has been turned loose by Army engineers in their war on the Potomac River pests—water chestnuts.

Described as an underwater mowing machine, in action it looks like a couple of "alligators goin' to town" to the swing music of Tommy Dorsey's Band. A whirling mower attached to the bow of a small boat, with oscillating cutters on each side, and two "duck-foot" paddles waving peculiarly in the air earn the device its name.

This is only one of the methods the engineers are trying out on the 9,000 acres of water chestnuts in a 40-mile stretch in the Potomac below the city. A group of CCC boys are at work pulling it up by hand, and chemical sprays are being used.

Officials yesterday warned swimmers and canoers away from Oxon Cove, opposite Alexandria. Poisons, including arsenic and caustic soda, have been spread on the weed.

On Monday the "jitterbug" will have a companion in the river. It is a mascerator, used with considerable success against the water hyacinth in Florida. Circular blades, similar to a buzz-saw, are an inch apart on a 4-foot axle behind a small barge. These revolve at high speed, slicing up the plants and propelling the vessel.

The engineers say that eradication of the water chestnut from the Potomac will take several years. This year's activities are mainly experimental. Besides driving away wild fowl and fish, the plant is a breeding place for mosquitoes and is a menace to navigation in the river's tributaries.

Slayer Starts Term; Feared New Trial

Nathan Boyd, 24, colored, yesterday began the life imprisonment he preferred to risking a death sentence in a new trial for murder. Boyd was convicted recently of second degree murder, for killing and mutilating a colored woman. He first sought a new trial, but withdrew his motion and accepted a life term before Justice Adkins.

Parking Code Changed for Ten Streets

Two Others Made One-Way by Order Of Commissioners In Northwest Area

The District Commissioners yesterday ordered further parking restrictions on ten streets in the Northwest section. Two other streets were designated as one-way.

Due to the large number of people fishing in the vicinity of Chain Bridge and Fletcher's Boat House, Traffic Director Van Duzer recommended parking restrictions along Canal road to reduce the traffic hazards.

The restrictions affecting Canal road follow: From Chain Bridge to Weaver terrace, no parking on the south side at any time. On the north side, for a distance of 100 yards east of Chain Bridge, no parking. On the north side, for a distance of 100 yards west of the intersection of Reservoir road, no parking.

No parking at any time on the following streets:

Florida avenue, from Ninth street to West Virginia avenue, south side.

Limited parking restrictions were ordered for two streets. These are:

G street, on the north side, covering a space of 85 feet east of 45 G street, parking shall be limited to 30 minutes from 7:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.

M street: From Twenty-eighth street to Pennsylvania avenue, no parking on the south side between 8 and 9:30 a. m. and from 4 to 6 p. m., and on the north side from Twenty-eighth street west for a distance of 95 feet.

The one-way streets are Beecher street from Tunlaw road to Thirty-ninth street for westbound traffic only and Cathedral avenue, from Woodley place to Connecticut avenue for westbound traffic only, from 4 to 5:30 p. m. and from 12 to 1:30 p. m. on Saturdays.

Pedestrian Needs Control as Well as Aid, Council Finds

The pedestrian is a peculiar creature.

He is at one and the same time the forgotten man and the problem child of traffic. He has been neglected, but he also has been pampered and spoiled.

The time has come to clamp down on him and make him obey traffic rules as motorists are made to obey them. But the time also has come to give him the same attention and protection the motorist gets.

These are findings of a committee of the National Safety Council, which has just completed a study of the pedestrian problem. The pedestrian, the committee reported, is a major headache in America's traffic situation and the way to cut a big chunk out of the annual accident toll is to pay more attention to him.

Last year, three of every five persons killed in traffic were pedestrians. Of the 12,500 pedestrians killed, two-thirds were violating a traffic ordinance or committing an obviously unsafe act.

Shinault was shot when he went to the house to investigate a complaint. Bullock fled and was caught in Newark, N. J., last April 27.

Randolph Says A Good Name Is Best Wealth

Legislator Cites Lee Anecdote Before Insurance Adjusters

Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, last night declared that no man or profession can have any greater wealth than the "integrity of name and reputation." He spoke before 100 members and guests of the National Association of Independent Insurance Adjusters at a banquet in the Washington Hotel.

The chairman of the House District Committee recalled an occasion shortly after the Civil War when "the promoters of a certain enterprise—it later turned out to be a fake stock proposition—approached Gen. Robert E. Lee and offered him $50,000 for the use of his name on their letterhead."

Lee's reply, Randolph related, was, "Gentlemen, I have only one thing left to me—my name. That is not for sale."

"I think that is the finest answer ever given," the legislator said, "to any group seeking to use any man's name or influence for a cause that does not ring 100 per cent true."

Randolph appealed for wider participation in the processes of government, pointing out that only 67 out of every 100 eligible voters took part in the Presidential election of 1936.

"Unless we secure greater recognition of the duties of citizenship," he warned, "this country will be faced with a dictatorship as complete as any across the sea."

U. S. to Burn Building to Test Efficiency of Gas Extinguisher

Old Firestone Structure at Third And Independence Doomed for Science Sometime Next Month

Senators and Congressman looking out their windows one day next month and seeing a building near Capitol Hill on fire—a very spectacular fire—need not take alarm.

It will only be science on the qui vive.

In other words, their honors will be witnesses to the most ambitious experiment of its kind ever attempted, one in which the old Firestone building at Third street and Independence avenue southwest will be destroyed to test the efficiency of carbon dioxide as a fire extinguisher.

Plans for the test were learned yesterday at the Bureau of Standards, whose scientists will take notes methodically as the flames blaze away.

The structure to be sacrificed has to be demolished anyhow to make way for the new Social Security Board Building.

Usefulness of carbon dioxide in smothering certain kinds of fires has been recognized for about 20 years. However, much remains to be learned as to its efficiency because very few municipal fire departments are equipped with gas trucks.

When the Bureau of Standards heard that the Firestone Building had to be torn down, S. H. Ingberg, chief of the fire resistance section, recognized an opportunity he had long awaited—a controlled test on a comparatively large scale.

The "trial by fire" could be conducted any day now, except that the strike of carpenters is holding up the contractor on the site. The test is tentatively scheduled for the first of July.

The gas will be fed to the flames through a hose, just like water. More than 12 tons of carbon dioxide will be used, a prodigious amount compared with previous small-scale experiments.

Ingberg, who is secretary of the Federal Fire Council, recalls only one city fire department—Los Angeles'—which is equipped with a carbon dioxide tank truck. Washington's department, much of whose equipment is obsolete, has none.

Both Ingberg and an official of the District Fire Department said the gas would have been extremely useful in combating the stubborn blaze in the new Postoffice Department Building a few years ago.

That fire was confined to certain rooms and storage spaces on an upper floor, a type of outbreak which is especially vulnerable to gas, which extinguishes by literally smothering the flames. If the fire is unconfined so that fresh air can enter, quenching by gas becomes more complicated.

The two-story-and-basement Firestone Building will be filled with more than 100 tons of waste wood material, discarded paper records and other combustibles. The whole structure won't be set off at once but, rather, individual fires will be started in various rooms, gas being applied at intervals from a few minutes to an hour after the flames begin to rise.

'Monkeys Is Queer People'—One Gets Eddie Into Court

Legless Eddie Bernstein, a newspaper vendor, appeared in Police Court again yesterday charged with keeping or displaying a wild animal, to wit: A monkey.

This was Eddie's second arraignment and his attorney, Albert Brick, presented a motion to quash the charge to Judge John P. McMahon. He contended the charge was unreasonable.

Bernstein had been arrested in November on a charge of obstructing the sidewalk. At that time he had a dog. That charge was dismissed.

In his argument yesterday, Attorney Brick told Judge McMahon that under the new animal regulation, his client would have to pay the District $365 a year license fee and that "the zoo would have to pay a similar amount for each of its animals." The law, he said, requires a $1-a-day tax.

Judge McMahon overruled the motion and continued the case until next Friday.

Birth Rate Rises For Second Year

The national birth rate increased in 1938 for the second consecutive year, with 17.6 live births per 1,000 population compared with 17 per 1,000 in 1937, and 16.7 per 1,000 in 1936, the Census Bureau reported yesterday.

Officials emphasized, however, that the slight increases in the last two years cannot be taken as an assurance that the rapid decline of the Nation's birth rate during the last 20 years has been checked. Greatest increases were noted in Kentucky, Idaho, Wyoming, Nevada, Louisiana, Indiana and California.

Early Birds Club Elects McCarthy

Leland S. McCarthy has been appointed chairman of the program committee of the Early Birds Breakfast Club, it was announced yesterday by William A. Edelblut, recently elected president.

The meetings will be sponsored by the Federation of Baptist Young People's Unions and the Baptist Student Union of the District of Columbia.

To be held daily at 7:45 p. m. through Sunday, the meetings will be open to the public and the addresses will be centered around the theme, "Christ, My Only Necessity." With the exception of Glenn Blackburn, Louisville seminarian, who speaks Sunday, all the participants will be Baptist young people of the District.

The Rev. Robert Savage, assistant pastor of the host church, will speak Monday, pastors' night; Norman Woodruff, Tuesday, juniors' night; Haley Scurlock, Wednesday, student night; L. D. Johnson, Thursday, interdenominational night; John Gordon Mein, Friday, international night, and Howard Rees, Saturday, Sunday School night. Blackburn will address an additional meeting at 1 a. m., Sunday, July 2.

War, Library Blueprints Approved

Planning and Arts Bodies Also Pass On New Route for Mt. Vernon Highway

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Fine Arts Commission, in joint session, yesterday gave final approval to revised plans for the first unit of the new War Department Building, the new central library building and relocation of the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway at Gravelly Point.

Plans of several years standing to build a new home for the Navy Department in the westernmost part of the "northwest rectangle," where the Naval Hospital and National Institute of Health now stand, were confirmed by the two bodies.

Action on the Navy structure, which would be erected immediately west of Army headquarters, was taken as result of introduction of a bill last week by Chairman Vinson, of the House Naval Affairs Committee, authorizing expenditure of $23,466,000 on the project.

Naval Hospital will be transferred in a few years to the medical center near Bethesda on which work will be started soon. The National Institute of Health already is in process of moving to its new home, just across the Rockville Pike from the medical center site.

Congress last year authorized $26,000,000 for the War Department Building, which will be bounded by Twenty-first, Twenty-third, C and E streets northwest. Under a $3,000,000 appropriation, work is almost ready to begin on the first unit.

Army Streamlines Drill Regulations; In Effect Sept. 1

New "streamlined" infantry drill regulations will go into effect in the Regular Army and National Guard September 1, it was announced yesterday.

"Squads left and squads right" will be abolished in favor of more simplified procedure, it was said. Squads of varying size up to 12 men will line up in a single row with columns being formed by doing a "right face." Other movements also are simplified to shorten the training of recruits.

Other changes in the new drill regulations, first issued since the World War, reduce the marching cadence of troops from 128 to 120 steps a minute, and require that men in formation execute "eyes right" when passing a reviewing officer.

Navy Names Crenshaw Chief Of War Plans

The Navy yesterday named Capt. Russell S. Crenshaw as director of of War Plans, to succeed Rear Admiral Robert L. Ghormley next month.

A native of Richmond, Va., Capt. Crenshaw now makes his home here at 3703 Northampton street. He entered the Navy in 1903, and was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1906. During the World War he served with the battleship division of the Atlantic Fleet and was in charge of the convoy section at the Navy Department. He is now on duty here.

Admiral Ghormley will become assistant chief of operations next month.

Boy, 16, Flees Training School In Mother's Car

The mother of a 16-year-old inmate of the National Training School for Boys unwittingly helped her son to escape yesterday, police reported.

The boy stole his mother's car to make his getaway when she came to visit him at the school, and left the ignition keys in the car.

She told police she came from Illinois to see the boy. She talked with him a few minutes, then left to meet the school officials. In her absence he drove away in her car.

A search for the boy was ordered by police or Washington and Prince Georges County last night.

Takoma Park Orchard Club Blooms Again

Reunion at Home Of Miss Stockberger; 18 Founders Still Active

Formed a quarter-century ago in a pear orchard at Takoma Park, Md., the Orchard Club met again last night at the home of Miss Lucille Stockberger, 529 Cedar street northwest, Takoma Park, D. C.

The immediate reason for last night's reunion was the return of the club's only two members who have moved from Takoma Park since the club was formed. They are Mrs. Lorena Randall Hicks, of St. Charles, Ark., and Mrs. Margaret Kroll Tibbetts, of Alton, Ill.

The club, all of whose original 18 members still are active, was formed among a group of schoolgirls, most of whom attended Takoma Park Presbyterian Sunday School, recalled last night the day they organized. They met that day in a two-room shack, abandoned on a vacant lot by a contractor among a dozen pear trees.

Then, in 1915, they began to take their club seriously. Until eight years ago, it met with due parliamentary formality, with club officers and regular meeting dates. Mary Parker Leary was it last president.

Purely social, the club held holiday homecoming dances beginning in 1916 and continuing six years for members away at college. Each summer they vacationed at Blue Ridge Summit, Md.

The winter, before they organized their club, the girls kept busy making a quilt for their first bride, now Mrs. Grace Cruit Ellis. And, they recalled last night, it has been ten years now since the club celebrated a wedding. That was when "Bunny" Parker became Mrs. Elnathan Kemper Nelson, who lives in Sligo Park Hills and is considered by the club as its leader.

At its meeting last night the members saw pictures of themselves made by its hostess when they were Camp Fire Girls and others made by Miss Stockberger not long ago. Miss Stockberger, registrar of the undergraduate school at American University, also displayed her blue ribbon won last week at the Potomac Valley hobby show in Berkeley Springs, W. Va., with her exhibit of 100 miniature horses. She also showed some of the miniatures.

Among those who attended last night's meeting were Mrs. Amelia Williams Burroughs, Mrs. Bunny Parker Nelson, Mrs. Mary Parker Dalton, Mrs. Ruth Beal Eschelman, Mrs. Irene Goshorn, Mrs. Anna Watkins Stowe, Mrs. Florence Burton Derrick, Miss Annette Burton, Miss Dorothy Smith, Mrs. Eleanor Pryor Bicknell, Miss Florence King, Mrs. Ruth Hedgecock Stevenson, Mrs. Fred Pierce, of Chevy Chase; Mrs. Hicks and Mrs. Tibbetts.

Light Comedy Features Bill At the Earle

'Naughty but Nice' Has Catchy Songs; Laughs on Stage

"NAUGHTY BUT NICE." Warner Brothers picturization of an original screen play by Richard Macaulay and Jerry Wald, with music and lyrics by Harry Warren and Johnny Mercer, with Ann Sheridan, Dick Powell, Gale Page, Helen Broderick, Ronald Reagen, Allen Jenkins, ZaSu Pitts, Maxie Rosenbloom, Jerry Colonna, Luis Alberni, Vera Lewis, Elizabeth Dunne, Bill Davidson, Granville Bates and Hallowell Hobbes. Directed by Ray Enright. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

Those peppy Roxyettes, the Earle Theater's always reliable commodity, whip up a smash finale of all their tricks to a stage revue that would do credit to the "Scandals" of George White. In fact, Mr. White thinks so much of one of the performers that only a few days ago the producer signed smart, funny fellow, Billy Rayes for his forthcoming—and expensive to watch—revue.

"Naughty But Nice," the Earle's new feature film, is something you'll think you have seen before, but Helen Broderick, Maxie Rosenbloom and Granville Bates are in it for the laughs.

"The Professor Steps Out" was the first title of "Naughty But Nice" and that about sums it up. Horn-rimmed glasses propped up in front of Dick Powell characterize him as a music instructor in a honky-tonk college, guarded from the ways of the world by three primpy aunts. There is, however, another aunt—she calls those three weird sisters "the black sheep"—who ran off to the wicked city years ago and now knows all the song writers and "great" radio larks. She has a remarkable chef and man of all work—we can't think of what else he would be—who comes running at her whistle or when she shouts, "Killer." He calls this lady "Hogan" and you don't have to be told that Helen Broderick plays her.

"Oomph" Lures Professor

There are two girls in the case. One is Ann Sheridan, whom Warners have dubbed an "oomph" girl. Miss Sheridan is primitive, plus. When she swings music the professor had seriously considered "symphonic," our hero enters Tin Pan Alley to stay. With Gale Page as his lyricist, he works up several ditties that are current favorites: "Hooray for Spinich" and "I'm Happy About the Whole Thing."

By the estate of a Russian composer he is sued for lifting a melody and is only saved from disgrace when Aunt ZaSu Pitts recalls she knew the composer in Paris—"in the spring, Judge"—and that he stole it from someone dead, before the copyright law was thought of. That saves him and, presumably, the genius goes right on lifting melodies and making an honest living.

Miss Broderick, playing a sliding trombone; Maxie Rosenbloom, bemoaning his burnt cake, and Granville Bates, as the Harvard composer who rose to the bench, are merrily what they should be and the rest of the cast behave acceptably.

On the Earle screen is a two-reel Technicolor film on a lesser-known hero of the Revolution, Hyam Salomon. Through his efforts, money was raised to pay the dissatisfied forces of Gen. Washington. Claude Rains, Donald Crisp and Gale Sondergaard head the cast of this exceptional short subject.

Billy Rayes Scores

That "Scandals-to-be" fellow we spoke of, Billy Rayes, is an impersonating juggler with neat patter. His easy manner and excellent vignette of Charles Boyer, as Pepe le Moko, make him a bright performer whose accent, if it is as authentic Oxford as it sounds, belies once more that boogey about the British sense of humor.

Owen McGiveney returns with his "Bill Sykes" sketch. The quick change king has lost none of his technique, and his remains a fascinating act. Elizabeth Houston and Dan Harden are an ingratiating song duo that register well, particularly with "The Girl on the Police Gazette."

Fresh from Forty-fifth street seem to come the Coon Creek Girls, for their yokelisms have a slickness that is suspiciously Shubert Alley. They sing hillbilly ditties, employing New Yorkese in the pronunciation of such a tell-tale word as New Orleans.

The Roxyettes' "Cavalcade" is something of a year's final exam for the girls. They do a little of everything they have done all year.

Columbia

"Rose of Washington Square" is Al Jolson's picture, and for this it is worth seeing, along with the flood of nostalgia it will bring those souls who long ago said such things as "it's fresh off the boat."

Although the characters in this successor to "Alexander's Ragtime Band" are allegedly fictitious, old-timers will claim they can identify them all. With Alice Faye moaning the song "My Man" and Tyrone Power going voluntarily up the river for a five-year stretch and Al Jolson wailing his mammy songs, perhaps they can.

You wouldn't think Jolson would make you feel better than the Faye-Power beauty team, but that was the effect on us there being someing mellow about his pretending and something kind in the memories which he aroused.

His songs are delivered in the tempo of the time and the taglines of his conversation hark back to speak-easy days. Which might be considered an indictment, so far as the acting and lines of the rest of the cast are concerned, for a fine opportunity for reportage of a bygone day was missed.

Loan sharks are unmasked in a crime-does-not-pay short which is pertinent and finger-pointing. Rural Hungary is beautifully depicted in a natural-color travelogue. That famed mile run is shown in the newsreel along with clips of Their Majesties going home from Nova Scotia.

Morgan Can Buy At Own Grocery

Frank Morgan can now go shopping for groceries in his own market.

The comedian has completed a deal for the construction of a large market on a corner he owns in Beverly Hills. Morgan is anxiously awaiting checking with studio officials to make sure the grand opening of his market will not interfere with the premiere of his new picture, "The Wizard of Oz," during the summer.

Shirley Temple Tames the Redskins In 'Susannah of Mounties,' Capitol

Star Appears in Her First 'Western' And Carries Day; Clever Stage Show

"SUSANNAH OF THE MOUNTIES." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Fidel La Barba and Walter Ferris, based on the book by Muriel Denison, adapted to the screen by Robert Ellis and Helen Logan, starring Shirley Temple, with Randolph Scott, Margaret Lockwood, Martin Good Rider, J. Farrell MacDonald, Maurice Moscovich, Moroni Olsen, Victor Jory, Lester Matthews, Leyland Hodgson, Herbert Evans, Jack Luden, Charles Irwin, John Sutton and Chief Big Tree. Directed by William A. Seiter. Previewed Tuesday, June 20. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

Having about exhausted every other type of vehicle for the exploitation of the extraordinary talents of the 10-year-old first star of the world's box offices, Twentieth Century-Fox now have tossed her to the Indians. This is a sacrificial gesture only in so far as the Indians are concerned.

BELL

In "Susannah of the Mounties," this week's major screen feature at Loew's Capitol Theater, Shirley Temple once again is a diminutive Pollyanna, suffusing all with whom she comes in contact with the sweetness and light of her indomitable disposition; having herself a time playing "squaw" to Young Brave Martin Good Rider, her first "leading man," and, finally, bringing consternation to the bad Indians, who have precipitated a bit of a crisis along the right of way of the building Canadian Pacific Railroad.

To get to the point, it is a melodramatic "Western," almost as violent in some of its sequences as "Union Pacific," in which the rapidly growing Miss Temple is starred in this instance. She is discovered first as the sole survivor of a wagon-train massacre, hidden under a barrel, and terrified by the approach of the Canadian Royal Mounted, who seek only to give her succor. Once at the post, too lightly garrisoned for the bloody tasks that confront it, Susannah Sheldon becomes the moving spirit of the barracks. She takes immediate charge of Inspector Angus Montague, as her especial ward, and is as promptly taken charge of by Pat O'Hannagan, as his.

Indians Raise the Devil

The marauding Indians are the chief motivation of the plot. The chief of the tribe is a kindly old soul—if Indians ever are kindly old souls—anxious to co-operate with the whites. But in his tribe are some secret and sinister renegades who commit all sorts of devilish depradations. To insure a cessation of the overt acts, Chief Big Eagle leaves his son, Little Chief, at the Mounties' post as hostage. That is where Miss Temple's first juvenile leading man comes in.

In the end, it is these two kids who solve the whole murderous business and rescue Inspector "Monty" from the stake just about as he is to be nicely barbecued. There are, of course, parts of this charade that are a little hard to take. One suspects, however, that Twentieth Century-Fox had no other purpose in mind than to present Shirley in a new and exciting setting, whether her vehicle adhered to relentless logic and complete conviction or not. It does no such thing, but will please Shirley Temple fans — particularly the youngsters. That is what it did at the Capitol yesterday.

In this subject Shirley executes a war dance, rides a pony like a veteran plainswoman, scowls down the most vicious of the Indians and even generates a little jealousy for Vicky Standing, with whom "Monty" seems to be falling in love. The only "song and dance" she does during the action is the humming of a tune and the execution of an old-fashioned waltz so that Monty will be able to cope with the Eastern graces of Miss Standing, daughter of the commandant. All very quaint, thrilling and largely unbelievable.

Shirley Temple, as goes without saying, still is the foremost of the acting juveniles. She acquits herself with complete credit as Susannah. Randolph Scott, as "Monty" has another persecuted hero role and Lester Matthews, his rival for the favor of Miss Standing, is the one who starts all the trouble with the redskins. Margaret Lockwood, in her first American film, is cast as Vicky and does well what little she has to do.

Stage Offers Novelty

Among the lesser players, this Master Martin Good Rider gives a good account of himself and Maurice Moscovich is ominous and kindly, too, as the heap big chief. J. Farrell MacDonald, as O'Hannagan; Victor Jory, as the bad Injun; Moroni Olsen, as the commandant, and numerous others contribute to the synthetic blood-and-thunder of a tempestuous play. The Indians, by the way, are bona fide Blackfeet and are present in countless numbers.

The stage bill at the Capitol this week offers a novelty by employing the Playhouse Puppeteers as a sort of composite master of ceremonies. The puppets offer introductory miniatures of the stage acts that are to follow and do it extremely well. The featured specialists include Pansy, the Horse, and her blonde ringmaster, always amusing; Betty Bruce, accomplished tap dancer, from the cast of "The Boys From Syracuse;" the Briants, eccentric comics, well known to Washington audiences, and Steve Evans, one of the better of the impersonators, who always scores a hit in this town. The Rhythm Rockets interlard all this with a succession of clever routines, ranging from "Minuet in Jazz" to the eerie "Skeleton Dance."

A black-and-white cartoon comedy, the Fox Movietone News, with some unique "shots," and Phil Lampkin's "Memories" overture complete the typically summertime bill.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, June 2

GOV. LEHMAN: Frank D. Roosevelt, jr., almost provided the first test case for the newly enacted statute which forbids persons from interfering with the work of a news photographer. It happened at 4:30 a. m. at La Conga, the Latin-American night club at Fifty-first and Broadway, as an aftermath of bitter resentment on the part of Peter Arno, who preferred to sit alone with Brenda Frazier. Arno had entered the cafe with Miss Frazier at midnight. At 3:30 Roosevelt and Bruce Cabot arrived. Cabot insisted that Brenda and the cartoonist join their table. Arno objected, but before any punches could be thrown, Mario, proprietor of the cafe, stepped between them. Miss Frazier and her escort moved to another table. Al Willard, photographer for the News, then photographed young Roosevelt and Cabot. The President's son objected to having his picture taken and insisted that the plate be destroyed. The camera man obliged—but destroyed a blank plate and delivered the real one to a reporter for safekeeping . . . To avoid any further complications, Willard gave Roosevelt the Masonic high sign.

POLICE COMMISSIONER VALENTINE: Despite the refusal of the ball teams of the police and fire departments to play against the sanitation department—because the latter group includes former major league stars—Mayor LaGuardia will insist that the games be played. Fiorello says that Auer, the police department pitcher, also is a former big leaguer . . . F. D. R.: The American Labor Party is behind you for a third term . . . Hallie Flanagan: That ad in behalf of the Federal theater project which appeared in the local newspapers was paid for by Eddie Cantor.

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES: Although Judge Manton has been convicted and sentenced, his photo still adorns the No. 1 spot in the executive dining room at the Federal Building here . . . District Attorney Geoghan: another major indictment in Brooklyn will be handed down next week . . . Cordell Hull: Mrs. Arthur Schnitzler, widow of the Austrian playwright, is applying for an American citizenship . . . Ambassador Oumansky: Laurence Steinhardt, America's new Ambassador to Russia, will sail for Moscow in two weeks. He's been in Washington receiving instructions from the State Department.

WILL HAYS: Tom Mooney attended the private screening of the new Civil Liberties movie at Frontier Films the other night . . . Mooney suggested to the company officials that a movie about the Mooney and Billings case would be successful . . . "But wasn't such a movie made?" Mooney was asked . . . "Well, once there was a movie called 'The Strange Case of Tom Mooney'," Mooney replied, "but the only thing strange about it was it didn't get anywhere."

GROVER WHALEN: The miniature Trylon and Perisphere being erected at Duffy Square, Broadway and Forty-sixth street, will be completed this week. It will be the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer information center for World's Fair visitors . . . John Nance Garner: Harry Carey, the veteran screen star, will portray you in the Columbia film "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington." H. V. Kaltenborn was signed yesterday to do some commentating in the film . . . Drama Critics Circle: Paul Vincent Carroll, who won two of your prizes in the last two seasons, has selected Burgess Meredith to play the lead in his new show, "Kindred." Barry Fitzgerald will appear in it together with his brother, Arthur Shields, who will direct. Bette Davis or Ann Harding may costar.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY GENERAL FRANK MURPHY: Frank Morgan, the movie actor who testified in the Buckner case, had only one comment to make after he was finished testifying . . . "I was paid 5 cents a mile and $1.50 a day for the trial," Morgan lamented.. "I'm practically on WPA."

JIM FARLEY: Diane Cooper startled the socialites at the Columbian Yacht Club, at Sands Point, last week-end, by wearing a bathing suit with a sign reading: "F. D. R. for 1940" . . . Conrad Nagel: when your daughter, Ruth, danced with the Governor of Arkansas at the Stork Club you should have made the introduction clearer. She misunderstood and kept telling him how much she admired his native State—Louisiana . . . Joe Louis: Lou Nova visited the night clubs the other night and assured his friends: "Please don't sell me short."

Psychiatry Is Basis of Odd Film at Met.

Psycho-Analysis Used To Pin His Crime On Murderer

"BLIND ALLEY." Columbia Pictures production of a play by James Warwick, adapted to the screen by Philip MacDonald, Michael Blankfort and Albert Duffy, with Chester Morris, Ralph Bellamy, Ann Dvorak, Joan Perry, Melville Cooper, Ross Alexander, John Eldridge, Ann Doran, Marc Lawrence, Stanley Brown, Scotty Beckett, Wilhelm Stone and Maria Blake. Directed by Charles Vidor. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Metropolitan Theater.

If you detest seafood, maybe it's because you pushed your grandaddy off the dock in 1915 and have been trying to forget it ever since. This is a queer way to back into reviewing "Blind Alley"—but it's a queer picture. It delves ghoulishly into the subconscious. It's the first picture showing a psychiatrist using suggestion to murder a murderer.

When Chester Morris, playing an escaped killer, barges into the home of a psychiatrist (Ralph Bellamy), little does he guess that the weapons of analytical psychology are more cruel and invincible than his own guns. Chester and his gang completely upset the Bellamy house party. The maids are tied up in the cellar, the guests chased upstairs after the rather offhand homicide.

Killer and psychiatrist confront each other with apparent calm. But the mind expert delicately shreds the mental controls of the criminal, gains his unwilling and rebellious confidence.

It develops that Chester has been pestered since childhood by a recurring dream of taking shelter from rain under an umbrella with a hole in it. Then bars close in around the umbrella. The psychiatrist assures him that the dream represents a memory of childhood, that if he'll dig up this memory and face it—the dream will stop.

A Dream Dissected

Rain, umbrella and bars—what do they mean? The umbrella was a table under which a small boy hid after turning in his hated father to the police, the hole in the umbrella represented the father's blood dripping through a crack in the table, the bars were policemen's legs standing around the table. Back of it all was the famed oedipus complex involving a mother surfacely hated, but deeply loved. A lovely goulash? But it's something new in the movies.

Producers of "Blind Alley" bit off too big a mouthful in tackling this psychiatric study. There's too much lag in the highly worthy home-life sequences of Prof. Bellamy. But it's a commendable effort for all that, more interesting than many better-done pictures of conventional motivation.

What the Hays office was thinking of in letting those oedipus lines get by, we don't know. Probably that the only people who'd understand their implications fully would not have damageable morals.

Cast Is Excellent

Ralph Bellamy plays sensibly and realistically as the psychiatrist, a good guy, who always takes another puff at his pipe no matter what happens, and is capable of outsmarting the other fellow in any situation. Chester Morris is always a good tough gangster, but in this one he displays a degree of sensitivity and nerves that not only enlivens the characterization, but is almost endearing.

Ann Dvorak, as lovely as when she played in "Little Caesar," is Chet's gun-moll. Giving her needlessly ungrammatical lines was inexcusable.

Big Extra Troupe In Ruggles Film

A total of 1,357 extras reported to the Hollywood Legion Stadium last week for work in "Invitation to Happiness." Producer-Director Wesley Ruggles has a three-day schedule to film a fight between Fred MacMurray and Eddie Hogan, former professional boxer.

The extras constitute ringside and gallery spectators, policemen, peanut butchers, ushers and other fight arena workers. Six professional "seconds" are included in the call, three for each corner. Russ Clark, former Chicago referee who turned actor, is the third man in the ring.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, June 23 (NS).—After holding out against movies for a quarter of a century, Walter Hampden, the Shakespearean actor, has finally capitulated. He has accepted Pandro Berman's offer to come to Hollywood and you will see him, my friends, as the archbishop in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." The role originally was allotted to that very good actor, Montagu Love.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Hampden's place in the theater has always been important. "Cyrano de Bergerac" is perhaps his outstanding characterization, although he is just as well known for his interpretation of Shakespeare, being considered one of the finest students of the Bard of Avon. Even though Ginger Rogers, Pan Berman and everyone else denies it, I know Ginger is being dicussed to play Esmerelda. With Hampden, Charles Laughton and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., in the cast, we can't blame RKO for cheering.

Pretty stiff price, isn't it—$75,000 for a property that has already been filmed? Yet Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is offering that amount to Paramount for the privilege of making "The Vagabond King," with all of Rudolf Friml's glorious music. The contract is made with the provision that Para delivers all the songs, lock, stock an' barrel. Seems certain of the tunes have been used in other pictures. Nelson Eddy will have the Dennis King role, and plans are to make it one of Metro's most opulent musicals of the ensuing year.

David Selznick had his chance to get out with his skin whole and make a profit on "Gone With the Wind," but he has refused. I hear from a reliable source that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer offered him a million dollars profit, over and above costs. It is estimated there is $4,000,000 in the picture now, but having suffered through months and months, David prefers to let nature take its course. After he bought "GWTW" and it became a best seller, he was offered up to $300,000 for the novel, which he acquired for a mere $50,000. The Margaret Mitchell book has been such an obsession with him, that he'd rather part with his right arm. Underground reports are that he has a good picture, and I hope it's true.

I've hurt Jane Withers' feelings and I am just as sorry as I can be, because she is one of my special pets. I said that her sleepless nights were over because she passed her arithmetic. Jane was very upset, even though she admits arithmetic is her lowest subject. I'll confess to her, right here, that I had to have a special teacher to pass geometry. And I couldn't do a problem in algebra today if I had to hang for it. Her teacher, Gertrude Vizard, says Jane is more than a year ahead of her board of education requirements, three months ahead of her class in languages and literature and two years ahead in civics, history and geography. So I guess I did Jane wrong. Anyway, maybe this will set her right with grandma, who is visiting her.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Rumor strong that Randy Scott leaves for New York soon to obtain a divorce from his socialite wife. Is the reason Dorothy Lamour, or Eleanor Thompson? Fay Holden, Mickey Rooney's ma in the Hardy movies, has a Mr. Hardy in real life. His name is David Clyde and Sunday they will celebrate their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. The Pine Needle Ski Slope, Hollywood's latest sport novelty, opened near Universal Studio last night under the sponsorship of Buddy Lighton. A crowd of the Lighton friends had a Dutch treat supper at the Beverly Derby and then had such fun summer skiing. The Henry Fondas, Tyrone Power and Annabella, the Cordell Hills and Tim Durant were in the party; Al Ettore, who fights Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom Monday night, in a ringside seat at Maxie's cafe sizing up his rival.

Eddie Goulding planes in Monday to direct the Mumi movie; Edgar Bergen and Margaret Reed doing the night spots, particularly Earl Carroll's, with Ken Murray and Jane Baker; several Hollywood folk received invitations from Tony Galento, who will fight Joe Louis, bidding them to a cocktail party in honor of Louis. "Everybody will be there," reads the invitation, "but the guest of honor."

That's all for today. See you, tomorrow!

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., June 23.—Interviewing Alice Brady is like talking with my own sister. For she started her career as prima donna in Gilbert and Sullivan operas with De Wolf Hopper when I began as his bride. I never dreamed I'd be doing a column and interviewing her. In fact, we did more reminiscing about the old days than about her superb performance in "Young Mr. Lincoln" in which the press of the country went to town for her. She was thrilled over "The Mikado" in color, as I was.

HOPPER

"Do you remember the day my throat closed? she asked me. "We were doing "Pirates of Penzance." I ran into Wolfie's room and said. 'I can't jut my finger down my throat. Skin touches skin.'

Wolfie said in disgust: 'Well, what do you want your finger down your throat for? Get out there and sing!'

"So saying he pushed me onto the stage. Of course, I cracked on my top note. And I'll be darned if I didn't get an encore. Which taught me the unfailing tolerance of an audience.

"Years later, when I was doing "Lady Alone" in New Haven the Yale boys, evidently out for a big celebration, were having a high old time. So I held up my hand for quiet. 'Please be dears. You know, this is our livelihood. Couldn't we have a little silence?' They let us alone, all right—there wasn't another laugh the rest of the evening."

Alice is terrified of crowds. When she got off the train at Springfield for the opening of "Young Mr. Lincoln" there were at least 20,000 people to meet her train. She was hustled into an open car where she waved and bowed. Her colored maid Nana was put into a closed car, told to bow and smile. Alice didn't know until later that populace thought Nana was Marian Anderson.

Mrs. Walper Wins D.C. Women's Golf Title

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

The heat is on in the mimeograph section of Twentieth Century Sporting Club in valiant attempt to lure more customers to the Joe Louis-Tony Galento affair next week. And much of the literature now flooding the Nation makes fair reading. We are advised, for example, that in five of his bouts Galento has dispatched his man in quicker time than it required Louis to dispose of the same fellow.

POVICH

Joe Louis required three rounds to knock out Washington's Red Barry; Galento needed only one punch, in the first round, to render Barry senseless. Natie Brown somehow stayed four rounds with Louis; Galento put him away in one. Jorge Brescia, the Argentinean, stayed three rounds with Louis; only one with Galento. That was also the experience of Nathan Mann. And Harry Thomas, who was knocked out by Louis in the fifth, was stopped by Galento in three.

It is, of course, an obvious care of attempting to build up Galento to a point where prospects would be that next Wednesday's engagement is anything but a farce. It's the old formula, of tearing down the champion's aura of invincibility and building up the challenger. The late Tex Rickard's publicity men were adept at it. They invented a secret punch for the overstuffed middleweight, Georges Carpentier, and at the same time hinted that Jack Dempsey was taking a beating from his sparmates.

Investigation of the records of Galento and Louis reveals, however, that one Roy Lazer, who lasted only three rounds with Louis, went six with Galento; that Natie Brown actually beat Galento in one of their fights; that Al Ettore went three rounds farther against Galento than he did against Lewis, and that Patsy Perroni, who went the distance with Louis, not only went the distance with Galento, but won the decision.

Jersey Jones Writes With Patriotic Fervor

Mr. Jersey Jones, head man of Mike Jacobs' publicity forces, is also ringing in a broadside against all of the "isms" of this troubled world in an attempt to needle some interest into the fight which is falling far short of the mllion-dollar gate it was supposed to produce. In his best promotorial style, Jones releases this:

"In an era of supposedly advanced civilization, with bigotry and intolerance and hatred running rampant through the world, the story of Joe Louis present a glorious illustration of the true meaning of America and democracy. For the story of Joe Louis is a story that could be written nowhere but in America.

"No youngster faced a more dismal outlook starting life than this colored boy, born 25 years ago amid squalor and poverty in a crowded, ramshackle cabin 'way down yonder in the cotton fields of Alabama.

"Today, through the speed and power of his fists, he has become world famous, wealthy, happy, a respected citizen . . . in which the welcoming hand of opportunity stretches out to high-born and low-born alike . . . Joe Louis is not only a great prize fighter. He has proved himself a real champion in every sense, a gentleman and a sportsman."

We have it straight from Jones that when Louis crawls through the ropes for the Galento affair on Wednesday, he will be once again manifesting himself as a fighting champion. It will be his seventh defense of his title in the two years since he won the crown from Jimmy Braddock, whom he left groveling on the floor in a Chicago ball park.

Joe Doesn't Duck Anybody

It's a fact that Louis has never side-stepped a bout. On his way up, before he could get a bout for the title, he fought four former champions, Primo Carnera, Max Baer, Jack Sharkey and Max Schmeling. He licked them all except Schmeling, and he erased that blot on his record after winning the title.

He won the title at 23, the youngest age at which a new heavyweight champion was ever crowned. John L. Sullivan, Jim Jeffries and Jack Dempsey were his closest rivals for that honor, each coming into the title at the age of 24. Among the last four champions, Louis was the only one who has been able to hold his title for more than a year. Sharkey lost his crown the first time he defended it, Carnera lost it in his second bout as champion, and Braddock's first defense of his title was his losing battle with Louis.

So much for Louis, according to Jacobs' mimeograph machines, and now what about Galento? Probably on the theory that the less said about Galento the better, little is being offered concerning Two-Ton Tony aside from the reminder that he is also called the Newark Nightstick, the Jersey Jolter, the Newark Iceman, Globular Galento, the Rotund Roisterer, Galento the Great, the Bellicose Brawler, and the Orange Bowl. When they're all wrapped into one, though, they still spell Tony Galento, which is why Joe Louis shouldn't be worried.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

Mostly Personal

New York, June 23.—The specific trouble with John Henry Lewis' left eye is that he has a traumatic cataract, involving the lower two-thirds of the lens, and that the retina is detached in the upper inner quadrant . . . Tiger Flowers and Harry Greb died while undergoing operations for similar trouble . . . The N. B. A., which lifted Lewis' title, will now investigate Gus Greenlee, his manager, who was quoted as saying the examination was fixed . . . The examination brought out that Lewis had been fighting for at least two years with a left eye whose only property was an ability to percept light.

CONSIDINE

The reason you've heard so little about Byron Nelson, the new Open golf champion, is that the 27-year-old Texan seems to have gone through life without stirring up one colorful anecdote about himself . . . His story is only that of a guy who became infatuated with a game, played it until he was physically and mentally suited for it and got hot . . . The failure of Baron Gottfried von Cramm to get a passport to the United States represents perhaps a $25,000 loss to the U. S. L. T. A., and the West Side Tennis Club, promoters of the annual national singles at Forrest Hills . . . Bill Hennigan, the old ball scribe, will make a fine publicity director for the Yankees.

Curiously enough, the greatest polo aggregation of all-time—Hitchcock, Phipps, Iglehart and Smith, the world's only four 10-goal men—was beaten in the only game it will ever play as a team . . . thanks to a 10-goal handicap given to the English team that opposed it . . .

Lou Little Befriends Buckner

William P. Buckner, jr., now fighting against a charge that he tried to defraud holders of Philippine railroad securities, will be eternally grateful to Lou Little—for going out of his way to shake hands with him a few days after he was arrested.

Clem McCarty winced when he read a local paper's obituary on George Conway . . . It said that Conway was cotrainer of Man o' War, with James McCreery . . . Man o' War, Clem points out, had no cotrainer . . . Louis Feuste was the only trainer Big Red had, and Conway, at that time, was Sam Riddle's stable foreman . . . Riddle made him trainer in 1926, after scrapping with Feustel, and Conway's first great product was Crusader . . . The late trainer was not very popular among the latter-day flight of reporters, particularly those assigned to interview him about the time the ill-starred $100,000 match race between Seabiscuit and War Admiral was on the fire . . . But the older guys thought the uncommunicative old man was all right . . . and they knew.

Nearly every gambling device known to man, except a horse and racing cockroaches, will be exhibited when Bob Ripley opens his Odditorium on Broadway next month . . . Bob will show how slot machines are fixed to their unfecund limit; how the "bird cage" is regulated; how an invisible bit of filing along the edge of dice can make more sevens come up, and even how a crooked faro box fixes a virgin deck of cards . . . The exhibit unquestionably will result in a new epidemic of slot machine playing, bird-cageing, craps and—if the faro box is crooked enough—may result in a repopularization of the last frontier's national pastime.

Considine Enters Big Business

I have been invited by a Philadelphia sportsman to enter into a combine whereby I am to get the day's "number" 15 minutes ahead of time, call him, put up the money for him to play heavily on the number, and boy, oh boy, we split . . . Now all I have to do is get the "number" before it happens . . . Joe Louis has grossed $1,441,704 in purses since the July (1934) night when for $50, he knocked out one Jack Kracken . . . His biggest purse was the $349,228 he made for fighting two minutes and four seconds against Max Schmeling last summer . . . His next biggest touch was the $240,833 he earned for knocking out Max Baer . . . Tony Galento has knocked out every man he's met in the past two years . . . If he wins the title he will be the third oldest man ever to win the heavyweight championship, if he wins the title . . . He is 29, Jack Johnson was 30 and Bob Fitzsimmons 35.

Chet W. Young, a San Francisco baseball fan, read our piece suggesting a handicap for ball clubs as good as the Yankees, and submits his plan, copyrighted in 1937 . . . He would give 1 unearned run to clubs playing clubs who are from 6½ to 9 games ahead in the league standings . . . He'd give 2 runs to teams whose league standing was between 9½ and 12 games behind their foes, and 3 runs to teams playing teams which are more than 12½ games ahead of them . . . If no more than 6 games separated the contestants in a series, he'd start them from scratch . . . he submitted his plan and it was frostily rejected by Judge Landis' office—probably on the grounds that it would help baseball.

Three Men on a Bunt—and Benton Is Out

Miss Brown Loses, 1 Up, On 19th Hole

Both Women Score 80 on Regulation Round but Champ Falters at Finish

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Mrs. Lee Walper dropped a 25-foot putt for a four on the first extra hole of the District Women's Championship finals yesterday at Columbia, a final dramatic touch to one of the greatest matches in local tournament history that saw Defending Champion Marion Brown bow out after a game, uphill struggle. The count was one up.

Although 12 of the 19 holes of the title match were halved with steady play by the Capital and Manor Club opponents, enough action was packed into the other seven to last a dozen more final rounds.

Mrs. Walper, playing beautiful golf, never down and possessing a lead of from one to two holes from the second to the fifteenth, watched her chances to win over the regulation route falter on the eighteenth, after they each had seven-foot putts for pars, and Marion's slipped past the cup and into Mrs. Walper's line.

Pro-Brown Gallery

A pro-Brown gallery trooped down the nineteenth hole, surprised when the defending champion was forced to go extra holes, and watched their star hook a tee shot that led to her dethroning as District champion.

Marion's drive was several yards in the woods to the left of the fairway on the nineteenth. She played a beautiful sacrifice shot in the fairway, while Mrs. Walper's second caught a grass ditch.

Marion and her caddy deliberated over the club for the next shot, and as her seven iron was bent, she used an eight, pressed it a little of a downhill lie and flubbed it in the same grass ditch.

Mrs. Walper hit one on the green, some 25 feet away, and stepped up to the ball and stroked it in the cup for a par and her first major victory. Miss Brown had to putt about 20 feet for a halve, providing Mrs. Walper missed. But she didn't.

Putter Working Well

A great piece of work with a putter evened the match for the Manor star, whose local championship aspirations are now deferred until fall, when she defends her Middle Atlantic crown. Mrs. Walper lost in the finals of the Maryland championship last month, while Marion was a quarter-final victim.

For the first nine holes, seven were halved, Mrs. Walper winning the second when her opponent was in the ditch in 2 and the sixth when Miss Brown chipped poorly and missed a short putt.

They continued their even tactics through 10 and 11, but the defending champion dropped a birdie putt on the twelfth to win her first hole of the match. She three-putted the thirteenth to go two down again, but on the fourteenth green holed an 18-footer for a birdie. They were all square on 15 when Marion's put-

Von Cramm Beats Riggs, 6-0 and 6-1

Tilden and Budge Acclaim German's Semifinal Win

By the Associatrd Press.

London, June 23.—Baron Gottfried von Cramm, Germany's handsome former Davis Cup star, thrashed America's No. 1 player, Bobby Riggs, 6—0, 6—1, in a fantastic semi-final match of the London grass courts tournament at the Queen's Club today.

Rushing to the club from the reception at Guild Hall to King George and Queen Elizabeth, von Cramm won two hard games at the start of the match, then took nine more in a row before the bewildered Riggs managed to win his only game.

Bill Tilden, the old maestro, sat at the side of the court and shook his head.

"Von Cramm is undoubtedly the finest amateur in the world today," he said.

And Don Budge, nearby, agreed. "I think Germany made a mistake in dropping that fellow. He's a great tennis player and the finest ambassador any country could have."

Riggs merely increased British suspicions of his ability. He simply had no answer to von Cramm's backhand service returns and the German's raking drives to his backhand. In the second set Bobby scored only six points and four of them came in the game he won.

When the 21-year-old Chicagoan arrived in Europe critics here and in Paris were prepared to see another great American star—a successor to Tilden, Vines and Budge as the dominant player of the world.

Instead they already are wondering whether he's good but careless or just careless.

In three recent important matches, Riggs has lost 11 straight games. He did it against Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, in the finals of the French hard courts championships when everybody figured he was the odds-on favorite. He also did it against Jack Bromwich in the Davis Cup challenge round at Philadelphia last year when the Australian came within a single stroke of taking two love sets from him.

In tomorrow's final Von Cramm will play Ghaus Modhammed, of India, who beat Scotland's I. G. Collins in the other semifinal, 6—4, 6—2.

And for the second straight year Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, of Poland and Mrs. Hilda Krahwinkel Sperling, of Denmark, will play for the women's title. The Polish star defeated Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Brookline, Mass., 11—9, 2—6, 6—4 and Mrs. Sperling eliminated Peggy Scriven, of England, 6—4, 6—2 in the semifinals today.

Yale Boats Defeated 2d Year in Row

First Time Either School Has Swept River Since Races Started in 1852

By the United Press.

New London, Conn., June 23.—Harvard's varsity eight defeated Yale in their annual four-mile race on the Thames River today and wrote a new chapter into the history of this annual water rivalry that began in 1852.

When the Crimson shell pulled under the finish line at the Groton railroad bridge, it marked the second consecutive year that the boys from Cambridge had won all three races—varsity, junior varsity and freshman—and the first time that either school had swept the river two years in succession.

The Harvard shell, beaten this year only by Cornell, went into the lead a few feet after leaving the starting mark at Bartlett's Cove, and in that punishing grind downstream the Cambridge boat fought off challenge after challenge by a game Eli boat to win by a bare length.

Tremendous Uproar

And as the crimson eight, stroked by Bill Rowe, flashed to victory, a terrific din went up from the hundreds of river craft anchored at the finish and from the spectators in the 25-car observation train. For it marked the fourth time in a row that Harvard had taken the main event in this, the seventy-seventh meeting.

Harvard's time of 20:48 2-5 was nearly a full minute slower than the downstream record of 19:51 4-5 set by Yale in 1934. Yale's time today was 20:53.

The Yale boys, whose coach, Ed Leader, left a hospital only a few days ago after being operated on for appendicitis, virtually rowed their hearts out before conceding to a heavier, stronger and faster crew. The Elis made their final bid in the last hundred yards and when the finish was reached, several of the Yale men collapsed on their oars.

Harvard finished fresh and strong.

Strong Claim to Title

The victory gave Harvard a strong claim to the Eastern championship, because losing only to Cornell, it rounded out the best record of any eight in this section of the country.

The husky Harvards, sparked by Stroke Rowe, were off the starting mark in front and in a few strokes held a 3-foot lead.

Slowly but surely, Harvard added to that lead and had a full length as they flashed past the mile mark and the sun began to set on the quiet waters of the river.

At the 2-mile mark it was still Harvard, by a length. At the halfway point, Yale made its first serious bid for the lead. The boys in blue lifted their beat and cut down the Harvard margin to a quarter of a length a few hundred yards past the 2-mile pole.

But Harvard, rowing a steady 32-beat-to-the-minute stroke, met that challenge easily and pulled into a length and three-quarter lead at the 3-mile mark. It was Harvard's steadiness that won the race, because Yale, with four sophomores in its boat, could not keep its beat in the higher brackets over such a distance.

Harvard Frosh Win

Yale made a brief bid a few hundred yards from home, and cut Harvard's lead to a length. And that's the way they finished out that short distance to the bridge, with Harvard's powerful stroke too much for the Yale sprinters.

The Harvard freshmen won the 2-mile upstream grind by two lengths, while the junior varsity triumphed by a length and a quarter over the same distance.

The times were: Freshmen, Harvard, 10:20; Yale, 10:30 4-5. Junior varsity, Harvard, 9:35; Yale, 9:39.

Harvard led all the way in the freshman race, but the Javee was a tough battle throughout. In the frosh, Yale tried to catch the smooth-rowing Harvard eight just as the finish marker loomed ahead, but Harvard had too much advantage and easily coasted to victory.

Tigers Pound Nats' 3 Hurlers, Win, 7-4

Detroit Goes Wild in Seventh Inning As 10,000 Attend Ladies' Day Game; Leonard, Appleton, Masterson Hit Hard

By Shirley Povich.

Washington stretched its winning streak to one and two-thirds games yesterday and then the Detroit Tigers took charge. They waded into Dutch Leonard's knuckle ball with an extra-base barrage in the seventh inning, hammered five runs across the plate and licked the Nats, 7 to 4.

Leonard was getting no worse than a draw in his bid for his seventh victory of the season before a Ladies' Day crowd of 10,000 when the seventh inning hove into view. He was holding the Tigers to a 2-2 tie and apparently doing very well. Then the Tigers began to get obstreperous, pounding his knuckle ball for long distances and driving Leonard from the box.

All told, the Tigers accumulated 13 hits off Leonard, Pete Appleton and Walter Masterson, 12 of them at the expense of Leonard. The Nats, with their 10 hits, succeeded only in knocking Alton Benton out of the box in the eighth inning. Lefthander Archie McKain was rushed to the rescue at that point, and against him the Nats were powerless.

George Tebbetts set off the first charge against Leonard in the seventh when he rapped a two-bagger into rightfield and moved to third, with the potential winning run on a sacrifice by McKain. He moved home when McCoskey slugged a two-bagger to center and McCoskey scooted home when Averill whacked a two-bagger to center. Singles by Gehringer and Higgins followed and then Pete Fox produced the big blow of the inning.

It was a three-bagger to center that scored Gehringer and Higgins with the fourth and fifth runs of

Louis Offered Bout With Rosenbloom

Los Angeles, June 23 (AP).—Fight Promoter Joe Levy said today he had wired Joe Louis a guarantee of $100,000 to meet Maxie Rosenbloom for the heavyweight title here in September.

Adding gravely that the offer was not a ballyhoo stunt to draw attention to Rosenbloom's bout with Al Ettore here Monday night, Levy declared the bid was "strictly on the up and up."

Sholl's 31-Hit Attack Beats Engraving, 29-6

A 31-hit attack, featured by Evelyn Walsh's homer, her third of the season, with the bases loaded, gave the Sholl's Cafe ten a 29-to-6 victory over Bureau of Engraving last night in a Washington and Virginia Girls Softball League game at West Potomac.

Ida Leigus and Thelma Aiken got six and four hits, respectively, for a perfect batting day.

18-Year-Old Mark Broken By Tall Story

Riddle Horse Beats Mad Hatter's Time At Aqueduct Track

Aqueduct, N. Y., June 23 (AP).—Breaking a track record of 18 years' standing, Tall Story, 3-year-old son of Questionnaire, flying the Glen Riddle Farms silks of Samuel D. Riddle, today won the Picket Purse by four lengths. Fourth in the recent Shevlin Stakes, Tall Story stepped the mile and a sixteenth in 1:42 3-5, two-fifths of a second better than Mad Hatter's old mark, while beating Mrs. B. F. Whitaker's 4-year-old Sickle T., the 13-to-10 favorite, with ease. A. C. Bostwick's Cacodemon was third, another length and a half away. The winner opened at 16 to 5 but drifted to 5 to 1.

Racegoers finally got a fair line on the worth of Isidore Bieber's Chilean veteran, Confiado. This 6-year-old had won his three previous starts in the States and had moved up in each performance. Held at 9 to 5 today, Confiado raced in a contending position into the stretch, then dropped back and lost the show by four lengths.

Don Meade was astride Tall Story, which carried 108½ pounds. The winner was giving weight by the scale to his rivals. Mad Hatter, when he established the former record, was a 5-year-old and carried 132 pounds.

Umpire Arrested For Disorderly Conduct on Field

Spartanburg, S. C., June 23 (AP).—William Henderson, South Atlantic Baseball League umpire, was arrested today by city police on a charge of disorderly conduct as the aftermath of a near-riot last night over decisions in a game between Columbus, Ga., and Spartanburg.

Henderson is charged in a warrant sworn to by police with having committed a misdemeanor in that "he did conduct himself in a disorderly manner by using profane language" in a public place.

The umpire defied fans who became incensed at a decision at first base. In the uproar that followed Henderson was bruised by a pop bottle tossed from the stands.

Henderson was released in bond of $26.75, which was posted by J. T. Hyder, another South Atlantic League umpire.

Nats Send Gedeon To Orlando Club

Elmer Gedeon, rookie first baseman signed by the Nats following his graduation from the University of Michigan two weeks ago, yesterday was released to the Nats' Orlando farm in the Central Florida League.

At Orlando, Gedeon will play in the outfield. Washington officials will attempt to develop his hitting by minor league seasoning. Gedeon, in his two weeks as a member of the Nats, did not break into the Washington line-up.

Best Policy, Paying $25.40, Wins Charles Town Feature

Carson Kirk Gives Victor Good Ride

Miss Dolly Kay Runs Second; Daily Double Pays $227.40; Vendor's Lien Scores

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 23.—Carson Kirk, young apprentice jockey who rode the first winner of two days ago, came back with a smashing ride today in the feature race of an abbreviated card. The Silver Spring, Md., pilot and brother of Woodrow Kirk, who has been a sensation at this meeting, brought J. L. Gartright's Best Policy home ahead of seven others in a test over the course of 6½ furlongs.

Miss Dolly Kay was second, four lengths in advance of the well-played Clymens. Best Policy, mainly because the inexperienced half of the Kirk combination was in the saddle, paid $25.40. The 7-year-old daughter of Trojan and Honesty was clocked in 1:23 2-5 over the slow track.

Miss Dolly Kal forged to the front in the run to the first turn and opened a good lead before reaching the back stretch. Best Policy was close up along with Clymene. Nearing the far turn, Kirk sent Best Policy after Miss Dolly and the ultimate winner took command. From there to the last pole, Kirk knocked on his mount and held the opposition safe.

The daily double stock soared with a $227.40 pay-off on the combination of "1 and 5." Miss Chicro and Small Devil, ridden in good fashion by Jockeys R. Klein and L. Garrett.

Jockey Lou Machado put up one of the day's best saddle exhibitions aboard Vendor's Lien in the fourth race, while Garrett performed in fine style in getting Bav home by a head over Huppy in the sixth race.

Tunney Proud Papa

New York, June 23 (AP).—Gene Tunney, former heavyweight boxing champion, today became the father of an 8-pound daughter. Mrs. Tunney, the former Polly Lauder, was resting comfortably in Harkness Pavilion. The Tunneys have three sons.

At the Post

Charles Town, W. Va., June 23.
Dear Al:

Woodrow Kirk, Silver Springs lad, lost an excellent opportunity today to gain in the jockeys' race by going to visit relatives in Virginia. He was scheduled to ride "live" horses in every race, but phoned at noon he was unable to get back in time for the races. Kirk, who stands second, has ridden 33 winners. Trainer P. H. Fitzgerald reported today that P. H. Pauleoner's Roman Boy, winner of four races at this meeting, suffered severe cuts about the legs in yesterday's race. Fred Almy, The Great, Bell Thorn, Romney Royal and Count Me are the latest additions to Starter Morrissey's schooling list. Jockey Herb Lauch returned from Delaware Park and will remain until this meeting ends July 8. D. C. Bradley vanned in Best Time for W. R. Heasley to train. Louis C. Leith, of Virginia, well-known steeplechase trainer, reports that scores of horsemen will ship their jumpers to the Belair and Cumberland sessions in Maryland. Dr. W. E. Trussell unsexed Madfoot for Owen J. J. Bejshak. BILL.

W. KIRK

First race—Whittle Pete appears best placed of the cheap ones gathered for the opening event. This one has scored over the track and should do a lot of running. Mr. Fingers has been kiddin' around and will be in the thick of contention if turned loose here. Stella Hampton and Grouchsuer have flashed speed and may be threats.

Second race—Golden Mayne was a good second last out when blinded by mud. With improved conditions this one should take it all. Pass Broom and Time Piece are as good as any of the eligibles. Landsman would be a factor if taken off the reserve list.

Third race—Boro Poker may take the front on this gang and stay there. An honest plater and he can carry the weight. Golden Key, with Palumbo up, should be right in the knocking. Counora had some excuses last out and will go better if kept out of trouble.

Fourth race—Prince Turley, providing those old legs hold up, should be prominent if not the winner in this field. Lady Buck has a bad post position but should be in the thick of contention. Charming Boy would be dangerous if in action.

Fifth race—Kitty's Rival is much improved. Breaks off the rail and has the speed to make the most of the position. Caidon is a hard-running horse with a good chance in this field. Clever Girl would be prominent if taken off the "also eligible" list.

Sixth race—Air Win has had a rest and gets a route that suits in the day's feature event. I'm going to string along. Celtic Legend downed this kind last out and is a threat. Royal Business is dangerous but seems to be heavily weighted.

Seventh race—Aufoin awoke last time with a good winning effort and should run right back to it in this. Lucky Turn won earlier in the week and is fit and ready. Minna has won two and will be right there, but breaks from the outside if he goes.

Eighth race—Never Idel goes back to a mile and a quarter for this and looks like the goods. I see no reason for mistakes. Keswick Hill has plenty of closing ability and will be close. Puddles belongs here.

Sub race—If this race is used, I'll take Itzie Bitzie, Blind Talk and Ginger Hackle.

Cravat Choice In Brooklyn Handicap Race

Martin's Colt Held At 5-2; Thanksgiving Second Favorite, 4-1

New York, June 23 (AP).—America's forgotten horses—eight members of the once proud handicap brigade—get back their place in the sun tomorrow.

The eight of them go in the $20,000-added Brooklyn Handicap, a mile-and-an-eighth spin that has been one of New York's biggest sporting fixtures for more than 50 years. And for at least this once they can run without fear of being disgraced by mighty Johnstown, whose dark shadow has kept them in almost total eclipse for the first half of the eastern season.

Johnstown can't win because he'll be kept in the barn for a well-earned rest. With him out, the wise boys turned to Townsend B. Martin's Cravat, a stretch-loving son of Sickle, as the one to beat down the long Aqueduct straightaway at the end of the haul.

Cravat was top-weighted with 126 pounds, from 3 to 29 above the field. Mrs. Parker Corning's Thanksgiving was second at 121, and then there was a sharp drop to William Woodward's Erratic Fighting Fox. The Fox drew 114; Myron Selznick's Can't Wait, Maxwell Howard's Defending champion The Chief and A. G. Vanderbilt's Heelfly, all 113; Brookemeade Stable's Handcuff, 108, and J. B. Partridge's Our Ketcham, a feather of 97.

For Cravat the Brooklyn is a chance to cut down Kayak II's lead in the race toward the handicap championship. The big bay colt won the $25,000 San Juan Capistrano Handicap at Santa Anita during the winter and carried off first prize in the $20,000 Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park a month ago.

Cravat will be ridden by Basil James from the sixth post position and is expected to start at odds of 5-2. Thanksgiving with Sonny Workman and the eighth post, and Fighting Fox, with Jimmie Stout and No. 4, will come next in the betting at approximately 4-1. Heelfly was quoted at 8-1, Can't Wait at 8-1, Handcuff at 10-1, The Chief at 12-1 and Our Ketcham at 15-1.

Burnett's 69 Wins Medal in Maryland State Amateur Play

5 District Players Gain Championship Round; Peacock and Medalist Favored

By a Staff Correspondent.

Catonsville, Md., June 23.—Volney Burnett, who failed to qualify for the championship in the Middle Atlantic championship last week at Chevy Chase, came back with a medal-winning performance here today at Rolling Road in the Maryland State amateur championship, playing the course in 69 strokes, 1 under par.

Burnett, who won the championship in 1937 at Manor, started with a birdie and played the first nine in 34, 1 under regulation figures. He started back with birdies on two of the first three holes and with par for a 67, went over par on two of the last three holes for the 69. He still won medal honors by 4 strokes, with John Armacost's 73 next.

Second Among D. C. Golfers

Burnett was one of five District golfers to make the championship flight, Maury Fitzgerald was second among the Capital contingent and tied for third low score of the day with 74; Roger Peacock, a two-time former champion and favorite, was next with 75. Southpaw Earl McAleer, medalist in the invitation here last year, had 76, and Ralph Bogart won the other berth with a great birdie in the playoff.

Two others lost in the playoff as six players left the first tee at near dusk, battling for one place. Buddy Sharkey, Indian Spring ace, nearly drove the green but chipped short and missed a putt, while George Molloy, Capital, also took a four. The other three were Baltimoreans.

Peacock Out in 37

Peacock had nines of 37 and 38, while Fitzgerald was 38-36, with 3 birdies. Bogart and Sharkey were each out in 36 but ran into putting and other troubles on the back nine to finish with 41 each, and the 77's. McAleer was consistent with a pair of 38's.

If favorites come through in the first round, Burnett and Peacock will battle it out in the afternoon. Peacock, who won the Middle Atlantic title last week and is playing great golf, needs a victory this year to retire the Sherwood Forest Trophy. The District is assured of at least one quarter-finalist, upsets or not, as McAleer and Bogart meet in what appears to be the best of the first round matches. Fitzgerald plays Eddie Johnson, Public Links ace from Forest Park.

George Sisler, Jr., Signs With Youngstown Club

St. Louis, June 23 (AP).—George Sisler, jr., son of the St. Louis Browns' famous first baseman, signed a contract today with Youngstown, Ohio, of the Middle Atlantic League, a farm club of his father's old team.

Sisler, jr., 21 years old, graduated last week from Colgate University, where he had pitched on the school team for three years. One of this two defeats in the last season was at the hands of Hank Borowy, Fordham hurler, signed later by the Yankees.

Girl Golf Champion Dethroned—New Queen Takes Over

Post Staff Photos.

A portion of the gallery which saw one of the biggest upsets in the recent history of women's golf in the District is shown in the upper photo watching Marion Brown, defending champion, sinking a putt on the eighteenth green yesterday. Mrs. Leo Walper, the dark horse in the finals, dropped her short putt immediately afterward, sending the match into extra holes. On the nineteenth Mrs. Walper rammed home a 25-footer to take the title. Lower photo—Mrs. Walper gets the trophy emblematic of her victory from Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, president of the D. C. Women's Golf Association, while Miss Brown (left) looks on ter responded again with an 8-footer for a par as Mrs. Walper's chip and putt failed. They halved 16 and 17 in pars, and then the climax on the eighteenth where they both had putts for wins, and both missed.

Mrs. Walper had 79 for the round, holing every putt, while Miss Brown was a shot higher with 80. Both missed chances with putts that died at the lip of the cup, but all in all it was one of the greatest finals in this sector, and a lot better than a lot of matches you pay $1.10 to witness.

Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, president of the association, presented the prizes, while Helen Dettweiler made a short talk following the match. Miss Dettweiler also received a prize. The second flight went to Mrs. Richard Kreuzberg, Indian Spring, who celebrated her birthday with a 20-hole victory over Mrs. Jack Daily, Manor, after winning the last hole to square the match.

Rosenfield Hurls No-Hit Softball Tilt

Tru-Blu Ten Beats Tru-Fit, 3-0; Tavern Loses, 7-1, at Ballston

A solitary lapse in the final inning, after one Tru-Fit batsman had been fanned, robbed Abe Rosenfield of a perfectly pitched softball game last night at Ballston Stadium, as Tru-Blu eliminated the Baltimore delegation from the Middle Atlantic Softball Tournament, 3 to 0.

Rosenfield walked Scharf, of Tru-Fit, and that was the only time during his no-hit effort a Baltimorean reached first base. Scharf, as it happened, got all the way to second on a passed ball, but there he died. The bespectacled Rosenfield turned in eight strikeouts and contributed to his own success with a pair of singles, though neither figured in a run.

The star of the second doubleheader in the tournament as far as strikeouts was concerned was Willie Perlman, a lightning-ball hurler with Nates & Leons, of Baltimore. Willie fanned 15 Dixie Tavern batsmen while winning a 7-to-1 decision for his team. He gave up only three safeties, though two were doubles.

Dixie's most disastrous innings were the first and third, in which the N. & L. ten scored 6 of its runs. Two singles in the first accounted for as many tallies, and in the third it was a single and double, three errors and a base on balls that whipped the local crowd. Oren Shanks, veteran of the District circuits, pitched five-hit ball for the Tavern, striking out only three, but his mates turned in four misplays behind him. Dixie's only score came in the third, sandwiched between there strikeouts on Kermish's error and Pepco Barry's ringing double.

J.C. Flood Beats D.G.S. Nine, 7-3; 2d Time in Row

For the second straight time this season, J. C. Flood's imposing array of high school baseball stars yesterday turned back D. G. S. on the Ellipse, 7 to 3, in a Departmental League game. Flood's previous victory was in a National City League game. The two clubs now belong to both leagues.

Jack Burroughs, of Anacostia High, was the winning pitcher, giving up five hits in 7 1-3 innings, allowing four free passes and fanning five. He was relieved by Jack Redinger in the eighth.

The opening score was made by D. G. S. in the first frame, and it took Flood more than two innings to tie it up at 1-1. Two runs in the fifth put the winners in a lead they never lost, and they added four more in the ninth for good measure. The only extra base hit of the 13 safeties in the game was registered by D. G. S.'s Sothoron, a triple. Hymie Perlo's pair of singles in four trips led the batting attack of the winners.

Turner Wins Net Title, Defeating Richardson

Victor Takes Junior Davis Cup Singles Crown, 7–5, 4–6, 6–4, 6–3; Earns Place On Team Which Plays in Baltimore Today

By Jack Munhall.

Eddie Richardson's surprising bid to win the Junior Davis Cup tennis tournament in his first year in the junior ranks was checked yesterday when the 16-year-old Anacostia Hgh player fell before the more experienced Billy Turner in the final round at Army-Navy Country Club. The scores were 7—5, 4—6, 6—4, 6—3.

Turner, by turning back the slender youngster, captured his first tournament after several years of play, and earned the No. 4 position on the Junior Davis Cup team which opens its intercity competition this afternoon at Baltimore.

Richardson, who had eliminated top-seeded Harry Brinkerhoff and third-seeded Jack Hoyt en route to the finals, draws down the fifth position, and also the chance to represent Washington in the Middle Atlantic Junior Championships starting Monday at Edgemoor. Turner, nearly 20, is too old to be eligible for this event, so Richardson and Brinkerhoff will carry the District's colors against outstanding youngsters from Baltimore, Richmond and Norfolk.

Inexperience His Weakness

The remainder of the local Junior Davis Cup regular team, as announced by Chairman Eddie Becker, lists Davie Johnsen, No. 1; Allie Ritzenberg, No. 2; Ralph (Buddy) Adair, No. 3; Jack Hoyt, No. 6; Maurice Cowan, No. 7, and Doyle Royal, No. 8.

The contributing factors to Richardson's loss to Turner were his own inexperience and weakness on overhead shots and Turner's superior net game, though it required more than a set and a half for the winner to realize how easy it was to score points at the net.

In the first two sets and throughout most of the third, Richardson, repeating the strategy he employed in upsetting Hoyt in the semi-finals, had Turner playing his way, which was to merely stand behind the baseline and get the ball deep to his opponent's court. But after being forced to overcome a 4-2 deficit in the first set, and a 3-1 disadvantage in the third set, Turner sharply reversed his tactics and began to storm the net behind long forcing shots to Richardson's backhand.

Attack Successful

How successful was this new attack is seen in the fact Turner quickly took a 4-0 lead in the fourth and final set before Richardson broke through to win a love game in the fifth on his service. With this game Richardson took heart and fought back to break Turner's service in the sixth and hold his own again in the seventh to pull to 3-4.

But Turner, who had been laying back, took to the net again and closed out the match rather easily, though the final game score was deuced before Richardson barely missed with a sideline placement to lose the clinching point.

In defeat, the blond and blue-eyed Richardson put up a fine battle and gave indisputable proof that he'll be quite a player by the time he reaches Turner's age, and maybe much sooner. He has a well-rounded game, whose only weakness is the aforementioned overhead shot, which he almost invariably hits beyond the baselines. His trouble there is obvious—he is hitting up at the ball instead of down.

7-Up to Play 2 Games Over the Week-End

Another week-end on the road will be undergone by 7-UP, of the Industrial League, Saturday and Sunday when it engages Warsaw (Va.) A. C. and the Frederick (Md.) Hustlers. Lanny Birch is expected to carry the pitching burden in Saturday's game, and Lefty McIntire will work on Sunday. All players are requested to meet at Tenth and H streets northwest at 11 a. m. today.

Parker, Mako Lead Advance At Chicago

Surface and Mulloy Also Win in Clay Courts Title Event

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 23.—Frank Parker, of Pasadena, Calif., and Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, two of the Nation's top-notch net stars, moved smoothly ahead today in their efforts to clinch major honors in the National Clay Courts tennis championships at the River Forest Club.

Parker, seeded No. 1, got no exercise in his advance into the singles quarter-finals. He moved ahead on a default by Warren Christner, of Austin, Tex. In the doubles Parker teamed with Mako to win two matches to reach the quarter finals of that division.

The Parker-Mako team, strong favorites, trounced Charles Kenlay and Bill Stone, of Chicago, 6—0, 6—2 and then defeated another local combination, Charles Shostrom and Art Jorgenson, 6—2, 7—5.

Hal Surface, of Kansas City, Gardner Mulloy, of Miami, Fla., and Wayne Sabin, of Portland, Ore., were among other well regarded entries to advance. Ted Olewine, of Santa Monica, Calif., however, was not so fortunate. Olewine, seeded tenth, was eliminated by Bill Talbert, of Cincinnati, 2—6, 4—6, 6—2, 6—3, 6—2.

The only Chicago player remaining in the singles division was Seymour Greenberg, who Thursday defeated Bob Kamrath, of Austin, Tex., fifth seeded entry, and today downed Normal Bickel, of Chicago, 6—3, 6—0, 8—6.

Wayne Sabin, Portland, Ore., vs. Harold Surface, Kansas City.

Gardner Mulloy, Miami, Fla., vs. William Talbert, Cincinnati.

Frank Parker, Pasadena, Calif., vs. Robert Harman, Oakland, Calif.

Gene Mako, Los Angeles, vs. Seymour Greenberg, Chicago.

Defending Champ, Co-Medalist Defeated in Virginia Amateur

Watts, Miller Ousted, 1-Up Quarter-Finals Are Scheduled Today

By the Associated Press.

Virginia Beach, Va., June 23.—Heavy golf firing shook the stately pines of Princess Anne for two "sudden death" rounds today, blasting both defending champion Jimmy Watts and co-medalist Burnley Miller from the twenty-ninth Virginia State Amateur Tournament.

Watts, young Lynchburg attorney who captured the crown at Hot Springs last year, was eliminated in the first 18-hole round, 1 up, by Fred Robinson, towering, gray-haired Newport News veteran. Miller, Ocean View entry, who tied for the medal with a par 71 yesterday, was also ousted in the morning round, 1 up, by Irving Blanchard, Portsmouth.

Tidewater golfers monopolized today's rounds, sending five players into tomorrow's quarter-finals.

Two Richmonders and Aulick Burke, lanky Petersburger who won the medal playoff, also survived today's bombing.

Robinson, a terrific hitter, proved himself a double giant killer when he went back out in the afternoon and whipped young Frank Sutton, Richmond, two up. Sutton was finalist in 1936 with Bobby Riegel at Farmington and had many backers to win the tourney here.

Morton McCarthy, 240-pound Norfolk youth, carved out the best round of the meet in the morning when he shot a two under par 69 to whip Jack Sterling, Newport News, 6 and 4. Sterling played on the Cornell University links team. McCarthy, who also qualified with a 71, came back in the second round to down H. B. Walker, Newport News veteran, by a slim one-up margin.

Henry Picard Takes Lead At Scranton

By the Associated Press.

Scranton, Pa., June 23.—Disregarding a strong wind that played havoc with Byron Nelson, National Open champion, and most of the other contenders, Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., jumped into the first round lead of the 72-hole $5,000 Anthracite Open Golf tourney today with a brilliant record 65, five under par.

Topping his performance with an eagle 2 on the par 4 sixth, Picard knocked three strokes off par on the outgoing nine in 32 and came home in 33, two under par, to lead the runnerup, Frank Moore, of Bretton Woods, N. H., by four strokes. Nelson's game blew up completely. He finished far down the list with a 38-40—78.

Picard's 65 shattered the previous course record of 68 established six years ago by Dick Metz, of Chicago.

A's to Train In California Next Spring

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 23.—Connie Mack's tune today was "California Here We Come"—but just where to take his American League baseball team for spring training was a puzzler even for the veteran manager.

"California's the place for a camp," Mack said after notifying Lake Charles, La., authorities that the Athletics would not return there next spring. Then he added:

"But we don't know just where out there to go for the right facilities.

"I'd like to be about half way between San Francisco and Los Angeles."

Bank Group Votes Saturday Closings

New York, June 23 (AP).—The New York Clearing House Association banks voted today to close on Saturdays during July and August.

The action was taken today after the 19 large New York banks making up the association had agreed individually to close under the terms of the Saturday bank closing act recently signed by Gov. Lehman.

The act is "permissive" and action of each individual board of directors was necessary in each case to effect the closing.

Cotton Futures Close 60 to 75 Cents A Bale Higher

New York, June 23 (AP).—Belief that an export subsidy for cotton was inevitable drove futures into new high price ground today. Brisk foreign and domestic buying carried prices 12 to 15 points higher, about the best for the day.

Nearby deliveries had to weather selling from Bombay, Liverpool and New Orleans but nevertheless kept up with the fast pace of the balance of the list.

The market as a whole stamped approval on consummation of the British-American barter deal, which will affect some 600,000 bales of American cotton. Its chief value, brokers said, was removal of a sizable portion of current tremendous Government loan stocks.

Much of today's liquidation in July was attributed to proximity of first notice for July contracts next Tuesday.

Rail Outlook To Improve, Report Holds

New York, June 23.—In spite of the unfavorable long-term outlook for railway earnings, promising near-term developments should aid the railroad industry, according to Poor's Stock Reports. The business recession which developed in December, 1938, appears to have terminated in May. Improvement is indicated for coming months.

"Substantial rail traffic gains should result from a favorable level of activity in the automotive, steel and building industries," states the report. "Third quarter automobile production is expected to record a wider gain over the corresponding 1938 figures than was the case during the second quarter of this year. Steel production is expected to hold above 50 per cent of capacity and may receive additional appropriations by Congress. Bituminous coal in consumers' hands was well below year-ago levels as last reported, and iron ore supplies were down 33 per cent.

Costs Reduced

"During the first half of the current year the most striking accomplishment of the railroads was the reduction in transportation costs in relation to gross revenues. However, even though savings in this classification will be less marked in comparison with those of a year ago aggregate railroad earnings should hold above 1938 levels.

"There is a reasonable chance that the Senate's omnibus bill will secure necessary House approval. This places all commercial transportation, except air, under I. C. C. control and revises rate-making formulas. The bill would at least recognize the desirability of railroad consolidation, which must be admitted as the best solution for present railroad difficulties. Furthermore, the Senate's railroad reorganization court may also become legally sanctioned. Even if the bill fails, prospects are that reorganization will be hastened and will be more drastic, particularly as applied to present outstanding equities."

Grain Prices Advance With Flour Sales

Total of 700,000 Barrels Reported Sold by Mills

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 23.—A strong revival in flour business helped today to give the wheat market its best rally of the month, with gains of more than a cent a bushel. Other grains, which yesterday fell with wheat to within several cents of the season's lows, also recovered.

After wheat quotations had dipped fractionally early in the session to the lowest levels in two months, buying expanded materially, attracting short covering as the price mounted steadily. Hedging pressure in connection with the movement of new wheat subsided.

Early reports indicated Southwestern mills sold 200,000 barrels or more of flour and later New York brokers said big bakery concerns had bought approximately 500,000 barrels, involving more than 2,000,000 bushels of wheat. The sales were reported to have been made for delivery as far ahead as July, 1940. Prices in New York were raised 10 cents a barrel.

Wheat here closed 1 to 1⅜ cents higher than yesterday, July 69¾@69⅞, September 70¾@70¾; corn ⅝@1 cent up, July 48½@48⅝, September 50; oats ⅜@¾ up; rye 1@1¼ higher, and lard 2 to 3 higher.

Chevrolet Sales Advance in District

Automotive sales in the Washington area thus far in 1939 reflect a sharp advance in public buying over 1938, according to figures received here from Chevrolet's headquarters yesterday. The company's new unit registrations in Washington have shown a gain of 52.4 per cent.

Washington, the records show, is among 45 cities of the country where the company's new car and truck registrations are more than 50 per cent above those for the corresponding period last year. In 14 of these cities the gains exceeded 100 per cent.

World Tin Output Declines for Year

New York, June 23 (AP).—World tin production in April dropped to 11,200 tons from 14,500 in April of last year, the bulletin of the International Tin Research and Development Council said today.

Apparent world consumption of tin in April increased to 14,300 tons from 12,100 tons a year ago.

David Samakow, of the New York Life Insurance Company, led the entire sales organization during May in the number of paid applications. Second on the list was Sidney Simon, also of the local office.

New Financing

New York, June 23 (AP).—Public offerings of new securities during the week ended Thursday totaled $93,581,498, Poor's Publishing Company reported today. Despite the substantial volume, only 12 per cent represented new money. Among the week's offerings was the largest industrial issue of the year, $50 000,000 of 3 per cent debentures sold by Socony Vacuum Oil Co., to replace $50,000,000 of 3½ per cent debentures.

Stocks Close Irregularly Higher Far East Situation Lends Uncertainty; Bonds Are Inactive

New York, June 23.—Security markets declined to join commodities which held the spotlight in a sharp advance, principally in wheat. Dealings in shares as well as bonds reflected the hesitancy of operators to take a strong position one way or another, as well as the disinclination of investment groups or individuals to extend holdings until something definite emerges from the Far Eastern fuss, or congressional adjournment permits a thorough appraisal of administrative plans and strength.

Trading idled through the five-hour period with the close irregularly higher after earlier uncertainty. Store, steel and some of the better grade rail issues made fair gains. Changes in other divisions were confined mainly to small fractions. The 100 big board stocks averaged 0.17 point higher on turnover of 477,610 shares.

The flurry in wheat prices, ending a protracted sinking spell, was reported based on long-term buying by the flour milling trade, some contracts extending into 1940.

Wheat a Speculation

Coinciding with the movement, which saw advances of 1 to 1⅜ cents a bushel at Chicago, was the advice by a well known economist that wheat should not be ignored as a speculation in view of the gravity of the foreign situation. Cotton rose 12 to 15 points, some commentators estimating that the Anglo-American trade proposal, rubber for cotton, would strengthen the statistical position of the latter. The supplies to be bartered are to be held in escrow for national emergencies.

Roosevelt's Program Negligible

President Roosevelt's $3,800,000,000 "outside-the-budget" lending program was adjudged by professional Wall Street to be negligible as a market influence. It is not unlikely, however, that the proposal restrained selling based on the gloomy foreign outlook. It may even have encouraged a little buying based on the idea that if the huge outflow is authorized, business will get better for a few months anyhow.

Celanese Active

Celanese provided a little excitement with a 2-point rise on volume that closely approached that of the day's leader, Loft. The spurt coincided with distribution by a stock exchange house of an analysis of the company which was decidedly optimistic. Steel common and Bethlehem each were up ⅝, although news from some of the steel centers suggested a contraction in operating rates next week.

This, however, would be seasonal and until after the Independence Day recess, the trade does not anticipate any large volume of new business. Pressure for deliveries, for steel and in some other lines is thought by a few commentators to represent nervousness on the labor situation, if, as it now appears probable, industrial production expands substantially in the later months of the year, some unions with plans for strengthening their hold on certain industries would be in a more strategic position.

Store Sales Advance

Interest in the stores was bolstered by Dun's estimate that seasonal influences have again failed to depress the upswing in many lines, with activity among wholesalers pointing to the resolve of merchants to prepare for fall sales much larger than a year ago. Sears Roebuck, which has broken sales records for volume consistently since the first of the year, was in the active division with a ¾ point gain.

New England Trade Improves

Mixed in with warnings by economists that the United States has lost ground to Japan and some other countries in world trade through increases in production costs due to taxes, Government competition and regulation, were reports that trade in the New England area is showing improvement, and that utilities are planning to buy equipment and material in larger volume this fall.

Employment also was said to be on the upgrade in some fields, including metal fabricating plants. Based on expectations of business from Federal Housing programs, certain stocks were picked out for attention, including American Radiator, up ⅝ to a close of 12⅜. Spicer Manufacturing was at a new high. American Can added a point and Allied Chemical finished 3 higher.

Auto Sales Continue

Another rise in automobile assemblies reflected maintenance in June of sales volume as well as increased schedules by one manufacturer to offset reduction in output caused by strikes earlier this month.

Traction Bonds Featured

Sharp advances in Interborough and Manhattan Railway bonds today featured the listed market for senior securities. Trading otherwise was quiet and listless. Interborough bonds surged forward from fractions to 5½ points on the firm offer by Mayor LaGuardia to pay $151,000,000 for the subway and elevated lines. Manhattan Railway bonds gained more than 4 points. B. M. T. 4½s moved up fractionally. Despite the sudden interest in the local tractions, trading in all issues amounted only to $5,290,000.

Treasury Issues Dull

United States Treasury obligations were dull and mostly a small fraction lower. The guaranteed issues of the Farm and Home Corporations were neglected, as the tendency is to await the outcome of the proposal to add tremendously to guaranteed Treasury bonds. Best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds were well maintained, as the rapid distribution of new issues this week again is tempting dealers to accumulate blocks for offering to large institutions.

Rail Liens Lose Ground

Medium-priced carrier bonds drifted lower, with few exceptions. Some of the default and borderline issues lost ground sharply. Holding company issues and industrial convertibles failed to attract any interest. Communications bonds moved a little higher on small trades, and amusement issues were firm. Other special groups were all but dormant.

Suit Filed to Question Title Of Climax Co.

'Conspiracy' Dating Back to 1916 Is Alleged

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 23.—Court action demanding transfer of title of two-thirds interest in the $81,000,000 Climax Molybdenum Co., to American Metal Co., Ltd., has been started by two American Metal minority stockholders against present and past directors of American Metal Co., it was disclosed today.

Climax is the world's largest producer of molybdenum, an important basic steel alloy used to give metal strength and toughness. The $69,000,000 American Metal Co., while primarily engaged in copper mining and smelting, has properties both here and in foreign countries and does general trading in ores and metals.

The American Metal minority holders' suit charges a "conspiracy" dating back to 1916, under which molybdenum was claimed to have been seized without payment of any consideration. The suit was begun in New York State Supreme Court last December 23, but was not disclosed until today. It asks an accounting of all securities and moneys received by the defendants and their assigns, and their transfer, with damages, to the American Metal Co., which they say is rightful owner of two-thirds interest in Climax Molybdenum.

The suit questions ownership of around 1,660,000 of the Molybedenum company's common shares, at the present market value worth around $69,000,000. Also in contest is $9,618,000 of the $14,427,000 dividends paid out by Climax since disbursements were started in 1933.

Originally there were two separate actions, one brought by Marian B. Gutwillig and the other by Alfred Turner, described as minority American Metal shareholders. The two actions now have been combined under one complaint.

Gold Importation Totals $22,164,021

By the Associated Press.

Gold imports slumped again to $22,164,021 in the week ended June 16. The Commerce Department said yesterday the amount was a return to the level of two weeks earlier when shipments totaled $27,919,957. The intervening week, however, foreigners sent $71,787,401 of the metal here.

The latest week's imports included $2,815,779 from Switzerland; $7,724 150 from England; $4,426,123 from Canada and $5,677,262 from Australia. Silver imports were about as usual, totaling $1,506,744, and including $760,158 from Mexico; $157,388 from Japan, and $242,846 from England. The week's exports amounted to $2,864 of gold and $24,304 of silver.

Pere Marquette May Loss Is $208,962

Cleveland, June 23 (AP).—Pere Marquette Railway lost $208,962 in May compared with a $297,795 loss in May, 1938, the road said today. The five months' deficit was $506,501, compared with a $1,786,520 loss the same period last year.

Reading Net Decline

Philadelphia, June 23 (AP).—Net railway operating income for May of the Reading Company was $947,193, a decrease of $29,567 compared with May, 1938. The income for the five months of 1939 was $4,160,073, an increase of $1,104,870 over the same period in 1938.

July Crude Oil Demand to Advance

The Bureau of Mines yesterday estimated the July market demand for domestic crude oil at 3,513,200 barrels daily. This was 22,200 barrels, or 1 per cent more than the estimate for June and was 2 per cent more than the actual demand in July, 1938.

The bureau estimated domestic demand for motor fuel at 52,600,000 barrels. This, it said, was 11 per cent greater than the abnormally low demand of July 1938, but did not amount to more than a six per cent increase over the estimated normal demand for that month.

U. S. Lead Output Increases in May

New York, June 23 (AP).—Output of lead by United States refineries increased to 46,006 tons in May compared with 39,250 in April and 32,977 in May, 1938, the American Bureau of Metal Statistics reported today.

Shipments were up to 40,124 from 37,903 in April and 25,098 in May, 1938. Stocks, however, increased to 129,270 against 123,394 in April. The total a year ago was 164,636.

610th Dividend

Boston, June 23.—A dividend of 20 per cent, payable on all policies expiring during the period August 1 to August 31, 1939, has been declared by the American Mutual Liability Insurance Company.

This is American Mutual's 610th consecutive dividend of 20 per cent or more.

Canadian Crop Prospects Good, Bank Reports

New York, June 23.—"In the prairie provinces of Canada well distributed heavy rains and showers have been beneficial and crop conditions on the whole continue favorable," the Bank of Montreal states in its current crop report. "Wheat is of fairly even stand and is stooling satisfactorily, but due to low temperatures, growth of all grains has been slow. Crops would now benefit from a period of bright, warm weather. The development of grasshoppers has been retarded by the cool wet weather and so far little injury to crops has occurred from this source. Pastures are in good condition.

"In Quebec Province moisture conditions are favorable. Seeding and planting are about completed. In Ontario continued cool weather has retarded growth, and rainfall is required in some western sections, but generally crop prospects are favorable.

"In the maritime provinces the season is backward and warm weather is required to promote growth. Moisture is satisfactory. Orchards give good promise. In British Columbia frequent rains have promoted heavy growth of all grain, root and hay crops and dry weather with sunshine is now needed to prevent deterioration."

Am. Export Lines Votes Stock Payment

New York, June 23 (AP).—American Export Lines, Inc., today announced a dividend of three-tenths of a share of American Export Air Lines for each share of American Export Lines, Inc., payable July 15 to stock of record July 1.

The first plane of the flying company arrived here recently preparatory to the first transatlantic survey flight for a projected regular overseas service.

Aircraft Sales And Orders Hit New Records

Export Shipments Are More Than Half The Total Volume

New York, June 23.—The total of unfilled orders on the books of aircraft manufacturers has risen to new peaks in recent months, in spite of the increases in deliveries, which have been at new record levels for some time past, the Standard Statistics Co. says today.

These unfilled orders are likely to be maintained or expanded, rather than reduced, in coming months, assuring most leading companies an unusually high rate of operations well into 1940. Not only are large-scale contracts from the Army and Navy scheduled to be let over the remainder of the year, but additional foreign orders should also be received.

Official figures for the industry as a whole are no longer released, but reports of numerous representative companies and data on exports suggest that shipments have recently been at new high levels. Exports last year were about half of the industry's total sales. In the first four months of this year exports were nerly $28,000,000, or 30 per cent higher than a year earlier. A number of major companies have large foreign orders on which deliveries will be stepped up over coming months.

U. S. Military Orders

Shipments on contracts with the United States military services will also increase sharply over the remainder of the year. In addition to the orders already received, manufacturers will obtain some contracts as a result of the legislation now on its way through Congress to appropriate $120,000,000 more under the program authorized earlier in the session. A previous appropriation for $50,000,000 to start the Air Corps program was followed promptly by allocation of orders, and, despite suggestions in Congress that placement of some of the proposed contracts be delayed, sizable orders should promptly follow voting of the new money.

Several aircraft manufacturers have been obliged to increase production facilities to handle the new orders, and delivery requirements on the different contracts vary. For this reason sales trends of the several companies will not be uniform. However, plant additions should be completed for most leading companies by fall, and regular production schedules established in the closing months of the year.

Baldwin Adds 2 Directors

Philadelphia, June 23 (AP).—William H. Harman and William H. Winterrowd, vice presidents, were added to the board of directors of the Baldwin Locomotive Works. Harman is in charge of sales and Winterrowd in charge of operations.

'What for All the Fuss?'—Louis Just Sits and Fishes

Amid dizzy reports of Galento's fine condition and devastating punching power and the boxing commission's threats that their bout Wednesday night must be on a gentlemanly plane, Champion Joe Louis remains customarily unperturbed. "What for all the fuss?" he asked yesterday at his Pompton Lakes training site as he took the day off to convene with the "ittie fitties"

Giants Blank Reds; Lohrman Gives Two Hits

Season's First Shutout For Any New York Hurler; N. Y. Wins, 7-0

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, June 23.—Bill Lohrman, a 25-year-old sophomore right-hander who wasn't rated a starting pitcher until two weeks ago, shut out the league-leading Cincinnati Reds on two hits today as the New York Giants slammed out a 7-to-0 victory in their series opener.

It was the first shutout of the season for any Giant hurler and Lohrman made a finished job of it, allowing only two singles—to Billy Myers in the third and Bill Hershberger in the fifth—and never walking a batter.

With this foundation the new York sluggers went to work for 16 hits off four Cincinnati pitchers. The first dozen were charged against Paul Derringer, who was removed for a pinchhitter in the sixth with the score 5 to 0.

Zeke Bonura with four hits in five times at bat and Frank Demaree with three for three led the Giants at the plate. In addition Mel Ott hit his eleventh homer of the season with none on in the fifth.

The victory was New York's eleventh in 13 games.

Philly Error in 9th Allow Cubs to Win, 4-3

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 23.—A fumble by Heine Muellar in the ninth inning permitted Stan Hack to score today and give the Chicago Cubs a 4-to-3 victory over Philadelphia. It was Chicago's fourth straight and their sixth victory in seven starts, which included a tie last Monday with Brooklyn.

Until Mueller's bobble, the game had been a tight pitching duel between Max Butcher and Bill Lee. With one out in the ninth, Hack singled. Bill Herman flied out, after which Hack stole second. Mueller then fumbled Augie Galan's grounder and Hack raced home.

Louis' Managers Ask Special T. K. O. Rule

Brown Bomber's Pilots Fear Effects Of Butting; Galento Expected to Favor Concession in Wednesday Night's Bout

By the United Press.

New York, June 23.—Joe Louis' managers will ask the boxing commission to instruct the referee not to stop Wednesday night's Louis-Galento title bout because of cuts, without first consulting those in the corner of the bleeding fighter.

In effect, they want a special rule to govern technical knockouts.

They admitted the danger of the Brown Bomber suffering brow, cheek or mouth gashes from Galento's butting or elbowing, and hence at Wednesday's weigh-in they will request that Joe's personal physician, Dr. Chester Ames, of Detroit, be permitted to sit close to the ring steps just below Louis' corner during the fight, and that the referee consult with Dr. Ames regarding the seriousness of any Louis injuries before halting the bout and awarding the title to Galento on a T. K. O.

Although the champion never has been cut in a professional bout and bled only once from the nose when butted by Bob Pastor, his pilots are taking no chances. They recall that three important bouts have been stopped in New York this year because of gashes—the Ambers-Arizmendi, Day-Montanez and Nova-Baer engagements.

The requested provision naturally would apply to Galento also, if Manager Joe Jacobs so desired. It is quite likely that Jacobs will favor it, because Galento is a quick bleeder and generally expected to shed plenty of gore when sharp-punching Louis starts shooting at his usually open countenance.

Meanwhile, retired Champion Tunney, who was quoted in Detroit as saying that Galento had only 1 chance in 1,000 against Louis and that the match never should have been made, came out today with an indirect denial.

In a formal statement, released by the Twentieth Century Club, Tunney said, "I think Galento has a chance, a great chance, a much better chance than the average sports follower or sports writer concedes."

Gene added that if both Tony and Joe landed their hardest punches, he believed Louis would suffer the greater damage. "Remember, Louis gets confused and obviously hurt from heavy blows to the head. I do not think Galento will be so easily affected."

Harvard's Captain Signs With Red Sox

Boston, June 23 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox signed Ulysses Lupien, Harvard's hard-hitting baseball captain, to a contract today and assigned him to their Scranton, Pa., Eastern League farm.

Luplen, an outfielder, led the Eastern Intercollegiate League in batting this year.

Pitcher Makes First Start Since May 30; Shutout Until Eighth

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, June 23.—Making his first start since May 30, big Russ Bauers held the Brooklyn Dodgers to seven hits today as the Pittsburgh Pirates opened their three-game series with a 2-to-1 victory.

It was the first full game this season for Bauers, who has had a soree shoulder, and was a shutout until the eighth when, with two out, Harry Lavagetto singled, Dolph Camilli walked and Babe Phelps singled. Lavagetto tallied and Camilli was thrown out at the plate trying to score from first.

The Pirates scored off Luke Hamlin in the sixth on Arky Vaughan's double and Chuck Klein's single, and in the seventh off Vito Tamulis on a single, a sacrifice, an infield out and a single by Paul Waner.

Bob Feller Slams Double, Two Singles To Aid in 11th Win

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 23.—One big inning—the seventh—gave Cleveland a 12 to 5 victory over the Athletics today and Bob Feller his eleventh win of the season.

The A's led, 4 to 3, starting the seventh, but Chubby Dean, whose sixth-inning single broke a 3-3 tie, was promptly knocked out when he replaced Bill Beckman. The Indians continued to hit against Bob Joyce to tally seven runs on six hits, including two doubles by Bruce Campbell, a base on balls and an error.

Feller fanned six and walked five. In addition he slammed out a double and two singles in four times at bat.

the uprising, but it was not an entirely legitimate three-bagger. George Case was an extremely helpful factor. He misjudged the ball at the outset, and then failed to hang onto it in an attempt for a tawdry one-hand catch.

Case, however, was a potent figure in the Nats' attack, collecting three of Washington's ten hits and drawing a walk in five appearances at the plate. He drove home 1 of the Nats' runs and scored 1.

Take Early Lead

There was a suspicion that the Nats would win the game in the early innings when they knocked Benton loose from a pair of runs to take a 2-to-0 lead. Taft Wright's double to center and Prichard's single to right produced a run in the second inning, and in the third, singles by Travis and Lewis, and Wright's infield out stirred up a second run.

It wasn't until the fourth inning that the Tigers made their second hit off Leonard, but it was a powerful swat. Greenberg drove the ball against the leftfield screening, only inches short of a homer, for a double, and scored on Higgins' single to left.

In the sixth, with the aid of a passed ball, the Tigers scored the tying run. Gehringer singled to right, went to second on Greenberg's sacrifice, to third when one of Leonard's knucklers eluded Rick Ferrell, and scored when Higgins bounced a single over Leonard's head.

Valiant Effort

There was a gallant effort for the Nats to get back into the ball game in their own half of the seventh when Case led off with a double to left, but Travis and Lewis were easy outs. West drew a walk and Wright knocked Case home with a single to right, but Bloodworth grounded out to Higgins.

In the eighth, after Prichard led off with a single to left, the Nats got a break when Croucher muffed Pinch-hitter Buddy Myer's double-play ball. Case drove in a run with a single to center and at that point in came McKain and out went the Nats.

Man of the Month

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.

By Walter Johnson.

Taft Wright and Rookie Bob Prichard were the outstanding performers for the Nats yesterday and to them is awarded the chief share of the points in the latest Man of the Month contest awards.

To Wright, three points, because his two-bagger and single figured in two of Washington's runs.

To Prichard, three points, because he drove home a run with one of his two singles and scored another.

To Sammy West, two points, because he singled in one of his five times at bat, driving home a run, and drew three walks.

To George Case, one point, because he made three hits.

To Pete Appleton, one, because he held the Tigers runless in a one-inning relief shift after an error threatened to bring a run. The totals:

Case	33	Prichard	8
Lewis	30	Krakauskas	6
Estalella	26	Appleton	4

Green Accuses Newspaper Guild Of 'Coloring' News

William Green, president of the A. F. of L., has told his State federations and central labor unions that the rival C. I. O., operating through the American Newspaper Guild, had launched a plan to "color the policy" of labor newspapers in favor of C. I. O.

In a circular letter, Green asserted that the C. I. O. had offered to "co-operate with all labor publications which are operated ostensibly for the membership of the American Federation of Labor."

Clyde Beals, editor of the Guild Reporter, issued a statement saying the guild was interested in supplying labor papers with information on co-operative practices. As to charges of "coloring," Beals said:

"Presumably, Mr. Green is talking about his Wagner act amendments and attempting to find some sinister reasons why almost nobody, inside the A. F. of L. or out, likes them."

Textile Makers Demand Subpenas Of AFL, CIO Data

Wage-Hour Administrator Elmer Andrews was called upon yesterday by the American Cotton Textile Manufacturers Association to subpena records of American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organization textile unions before fixing minimum wages for the 600,000 textile workers of America.

Tyre Taylor, general counsel for the Association, demanded subpenaeing of the records, declaring that unorganized labor is not properly represented on the industry committee, which recommended a 32½ cents an hour minimum wage in the industry. Andrews took Taylor's petition under advisement.

Meanwhile, the apparel industry committee recommended a 32½ to 40 cents an hour minimum for 650,000 workers in the industry. If made effective, this would mean increases for about 200,000, the committee reported.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

The next time you break one of the kitchen tumblers, think of the American glassware exhibit on display in the lobby of the Department of Commerce Building and quake in your boots. Too many thumbs in connection with one of these choice pieces could result in damages amounting to $300. The least assuming goblet, hand-etched, hand-cut and hand-blown (a pretty chesty job, that last one) is worth $5.

Only history will be able to tell the net value of the two glasses it is hoped will be sent down from the Federal Building at the World's Fair. They are the ones Their Britannic Majesties used during their visit to New York, and you're invited to come around and take a good look at them, if and when they arrive.

H. B. McCoy, chief of the Commerce Department's specialties division, says he's hoping to add to the display the goblets out of which the President and King George drank their toasts at the White House spread on the sultry evening of June 8. At present there are already duplicates in the exhibition of other types of glassware now in the pantry at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue. McCoy himself, confesses to being no authority on fancy glass, but he says that his wife collects it from time to time.

Most of the items are from Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

The first glass factory in the United States was a failure, but today the industry is cocking its top hat and going to town. Its total output exceeds $13,000,000.

First camp in this country exclusively for Federal employes is Hi-Catoctin 62 miles north of Washington, 1,820 feet up and 10 to 20 degrees cooler.

It opens today, although formal dedication exercises will take place later. High altitude registration is expected in July. The idea for the camp started germinating last fall and finally began to reach the organization stage early this year.

Under the rates set up, families of Government employes can spend practically the whole summer at Hi-Catoctin without putting their budgets in an embarrassing situation.

The camp council, recruited from 13 departments, reads: Dr. Aneta E. Bowden, Miss A. B. Coleman, S. Crosthwait, L. Goldstein, M. C. Huppuch, Mrs. M. S. Kerr, J. H. Lyman, J. W. Mann, Miss T. Pheiffer, J. Salamon, H. Sontag, O. L. Strayer and R. J. McCarthy.

For data in detail, get in touch with Mrs. Kerr at the Civil Service Commission.

Miss Louise O. Bercaw and Mrs. Annie M. Hanney, of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics Library, have won the Oberly Memorial Prize before, so they aren't too much excited over what happened in San Francisco yesterday when the American Library Association announced that they have broken the tape again. The award, to be technical, goes biennially to the compiler of the best bibliography on agriculture and the related sciences.

Their book, "Land Utilization. 1918-36" didn't get written in just one year. They've been working on it for some time—laying it aside at various intervals—to take up their knitting on other projects.

Both members of the team have been in the Agricultural Library for about 15 years. Miss Bercaw, whose hobby is reading, prepared herself for her present work in Atlanta, before the library school there was made a part of Emory University. All the way from Scotland came Mrs. Hanney, who at the University of Glasgow studied foreign and classical languages—learning how to decode Greek, Latin, French and German into English. After living for a while in Nova Scotia, she finally came to Washington to make her home. Previous to the position which she now holds, she worked in the division of documents of the Library of Congress. She has a daughter, Miss Agnes Hanney, who teaches math.

Carmen Luisa Cruz said she'd take the Capitol any day. Obdulio Melendez Mena was satisfied with the Monument. Both opened their eyes 2 inches wider when they saw the Pan American Union Building.

As Puerto Rico's delegates to the National 4-H Club Camp which pulled up stakes following the close of its conference here this week, they turned out to be top tourists.

Miss Cruz sews and gardens. Mr. Mena can tell you more than you can remember about sugar cane, tobacco, and hogs. And now he's working his way through college.

Travel Section: W. D. Butwell, head of the Editorial Division of the Office of Education, left yesterday to spend his four weeks with stipend at the summer music school at Interlochen, Mich. He'll be in charge of the radio project which will get under way there this summer. Part of the project will be a new listen-in series on American composers.

Headed for Afghanistan is Walter Koelz, plant explorer of the Department of Agriculture. He'll bring vegetables and fruits back alive. Any that can be adapted to this country will be Mr. Koelz's assignment.

Bob Burns Says—

Before many more months we're goin' to have another big political campaign. Both political parties are goin' to lambast each other and cause hard feelin's all around. I only hope who ever's elected President won't have European countries changin' Uncle Sam's name to Uncle Samaritan, if a war starts over there.

When Gus Biggers was runnin' for Constable down home one year he went out to Uncle Slug's place and said, "Here Slug, lemme hold that mule while you shoe it. By the way, I'm runnin' for Constable this year—and I'd like to have your vote. Naturally, you know I'm a better man than my three opponents."

Slug said, "I don't know about that. One of 'em is in the barn milkin' my cow, the second one is buggin' the potatoes and the third is inside rocking the baby."

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

A fine-appearing no-trump hand fell to pieces recently when the declarer failed to first make sure of his defenses. He took a needless finesse, lost the timing of the hand and his contract. It could have been avoided had he taken adequate precautions. The cards and bidding are shown in today's box.

H. A. V. P., the ill-fated declarer, writes:

"In a duplicate game the other night I could have easily made three to four no trump had I immediately hopped up with the ace of spades and then gone to work on my diamonds.

"West opened a small spade and as soon as East got in with the king, he promptly switched to a club and I was horrified to see my queen falling under East's king. He returned another spade, I ducked and East's ten held. Another club was returned which I took with the ace.

"The ace of diamonds was still out and by the time the diamonds were established it was too late to make my contract.

"If I had taken the first trick with the ace of spades, I should have knocked out the ace of diamonds and, when again in the lead with the ace of clubs, the play of my diamonds would have squeezed my opponents and nothing could have set the contract.

"Was I really so completely wrong in not playing my ace of spades at the first opportunity?"

Unfortunately, yes. As soon as the dummy goes down declarer can count eight tricks: four diamonds, two hearts and two aces. The remaining trick can be won through an extra spade, heart or club trick.

Since he has more than one alternative in picking up the final trick for his contract, there is no need for South to hang all his hopes on the spade finesse. By playing the ace he cannot lose if West holds the spade king, as the queen has a low card to insure its winning. If East has the king there are several chances of making the contract by refusing the finesse and going right up with the ace.

South's best play is the spade ace, not only to provide against the calamity that actually occurred, but also to gain timing on the hand.

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

CHAPTER XVIII

JODY SETTLED HIMSELF halfway up the live oak. Penny and Julia disappeared. The shade of the oak was cool. A light breeze moved through its leaves. Jody's shaggy hair was wet. He pushed it out of his eyes and wiped his face on his blue sleeve, then settled himself to quiet. Silence took over the scrub. Far away a hawk cried shrilly and was gone. No bird stirred in any branches. No creature moved or fed. No bees droned, or any insect. It was high noon. Everything living was resting in the heat of the sun's meridian. Everything except Penny and old Julia, who moved now somewhere among the scrub oaks and the myrtle. Bushes crackled below him. He thought his father was returning. He almost betrayed himself with a quick movement. A bleat sounded. A fawn was moving from under the protection of a low clump of palmettos. It must have been there all the time. Penny had known. Jody held his breath.

A doe bounded over the palmettos. The fawn ran to her, wobbling on unsteady legs. She bent her head to it and made a low sound in greeting. She licked its small anxious face. It was all eyes and ears. It was spotted. Jody had never seen one so young. The doe threw up her head and tasted the air with her wide nostrils. A taint lay on it of the human enemy. She kicked up her heels and made a sortie about the live oak. She discovered the trail of hound and man. She followed it backward and forward, throwing up her head at every few steps. She stopped and listened, her ears pricked tall above her great luminous eyes.

THE FAWN BLEATED. The doe quieted. She seemed satisfied that the danger had come and gone. The fawn nuzzled her full udders and began to nurse. It butted her bag with its knobby head and switched its short tail in a gluttonous ecstasy. The doe was not content. She broke away from it and moved directly underneath the live oak. The boughs below Jody obscured his view, but he could see that she had traced his scent to the tree and was lifting her head to locate him. Her nose followed the odor of his hands, the leather of his shoes, the sweat of his clothing, as surely as a man's eyes followed a blazed trail. The fawn followed, greedy for the warm milk. Suddenly the doe wheeled and kicked the fawn sprawling into the bushes. She cleared them in a great bound and galloped away.

Jody scrambled down from his perch and ran to the place where he had seen the fawn tumble. It was not there. He hunted the ground carefully. The tiny hoof-marks crossed and criss-crossed and he could not tell one track from another. He sat down disconsolately to wait for his father. Penny returned, red of face and wet with sweat.

"Well, son," he called, "what did you see?"

"A doe and a fawn. The fawn were right here all the while. He nursed his mammy and she smelled me and run off. And I can't find the fawn nowhere. You reckon Julia kin track him?"

"Julia kin track ary thing that makes a trail. But don't let's torment the leetle thing. Hit's right clost this minute, and likely scairt to death."

"That's where she was smart. Most ary thing would take out after her. And she's learned the fawn to lay up so still hit'll not git noticed."

"Hit were mighty cute spotted, Pa."

"Was the spots all in a line, or helter-skelter?"

"They was in a line."

"Then hit's a leetle ol' buck-fawn. Wasn't you proud to see it so clost?"

"I was proud, but I'd shore love to ketch him and keep him."

Penny laughed and opened his knapsack and took out the lunch. Jody protested. He was for once more anxious to hunt than to eat.

Penny said, "We got to noon somewhere, and a deer is mighty like to run over us right here. When you noon, you jest as good to noon where the game walks."

ooo

JODY BROUGHT HIS GUN from its hiding place and sat down to eat. He was abstracted and only the flavor of fresh brierberry jam brought him back to consciousness of his food. The jam was thin and not sweet enough, sugar being scarce. Old Julia was still a little weak. She lay stretched out on her side. Her battle scars showed white against her dark hide. Penny lay on his back.

He said lazily, "Them two bucks is like to circle back through here to bed up right soon, if the wind don't change. If you was of a notion to go climb one o' them high pine trees about a quarter to the east, hit'd make a mighty good stand."

Jody picked up his gun and started away. He would give anything to bring down a buck alone.

Penny called after him, "Don't try for too long a shot. Take your time. And don't let the gun kick you outen the tree."

Tall scattered pines lifted ahead from the desolate flat of gallberry bushes. Jody chose one that commanded a view of a wide area. Nothing could cross in any direction without his seeing it. It was hard work to climb the straight trunk with the gun in one hand. His knees and shins were raw when he reached the lowest branches. He rested a moment then climbed as high as he dared in the tree-top. The pine swayed in an imperceptible breeze. It seemed alive, stirring with a breath of its own.

He recalled the bear cubs, rocking the sapling. He began to swing his tree-top, but it was overbalanced with his weight and that of his gun. It cracked ominously and he held quiet. He looked about him. He knew now how a hawk felt, surveying the world from high places. An eagle stared down as he was staring, high and wise and predatory and keen. He swung his head in a slow circle. For the first time he could believe that the world was round. By turning his head quickly, he could almost see the whole horizon at once.

He thought that his vision covered the entire area. He was startled to see movement. He had seen nothing approaching. But a large buck was feeding toward him. Early huckleberries were offering food. The buck was still out of range. He debated climbing down from the pine tree and stalking it, but knew that the animal, more alert than he, would be gone before he could lift his gun. He could only wait, and pray that it would feed within a reasonable distance. It moved with a maddening slowness.

FOR A TIME he thought it meant to feed away from him, to the south. Then it began to move directly toward him. He brought his gun up behind the shelter of the branches. His heart pounded. He could not tell for the life of him whether the deer was near or far. It loomed large, yet he was conscious that such details as eyes and ears were still not plain to him. He waited for what seemed an interminable period. The buck lifted his head. Jody drew a bead on the stout neck.

He pulled the trigger. At the instant that he did so, he realized that he had not made sufficient allowance for his height above the game. He had over-shot. Yet it seemed to him that he must have touched the animal, for it leaped into the air with something more than alarm. It cleared the gallberry bushes with a high bounding, making long cradled arcs. It passed directly under the pine tree. If he had had his father's new double-barreled gun, he would have had another shot. In a few seconds he heard Penny's gun. He was quivering. He climbed down from the pine and pushed his way back to the patch of hammock. The buck lay in the shade of the live oak. Penny had already begun the dressing.

Jody called, "Did I hit him?"

"You hit him. You done a mighty good job. Like as not, he'd of fell a piece on, but I takened a shot at him as he come by, jest to make sure. You was mite high."

"I know it. The minute I shot, I knowed I was high."

"Well, that's the way you learn. Next time, you'll know. Now here's your shot, here, and there's mine."

Jody knelt down to examine the fine frame. Again, a sickness came over him at the sight of the glazed eyes and the bleeding throat.

He said, "I wisht we could git our meat without killin' it."

"Hit's a pity, a'right. But we got to eat."

Penny was working deftly. His hunting knife, a flat saw-file ground down to an edge, with only a corncob for handle, was not overly sharp, but he had already drawn the venison and cut off the heavy head. He skinned it below the knees, crossed the legs and tied them, slipped his arms through the junctures, and stood up with the carcass neatly balanced on his back for carrying.

"Now Boyles may want the hide when we skin it out at Volusia," he said, "but if you'd like to carry the hide to Grandma Hutto for a present, we'll jest refuse him."

Roosevelt Off To Rest Week At Hyde Park

Will Return Thursday To Lead Fight for Neutrality Changes

By International News Service.

President Roosevelt left here last night by special train for a week's rest at his Hyde Park home. He will return next Thursday morning to take personal command of the fight in Congress for passage of the Administration's bill to amend the neutrality law.

Also, the Chief Executive arranged to be at his White House desk in time to sign the tax, WPA appropriation and monetary powers bills, all of which must be enacted into law by midnight, June 30.

Meanwhile, new opposition to the Administration-backed Bloom neutrality bill appeared in the House.

Continuous Sessions Proposed

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts, introduced a resolution calling upon President Roosevelt to inform Congress whether official advices indicate that "actual war is imminent between certain countries" in Europe.

She also filed a resolution for continuous sessions of Congress "in order to be in readiness to meet any eventuality that may arise out of war and to solve the domestic problem of unemployment."

Opposition to the Bloom measure among Western Democrats was reported at a meeting inspired by the Democratic House steering committee. The opposition was said to have been directed mainly at the provisions giving President Roosevelt the power to designate "combat zones" from which American ships or citizens would be barred.

House Action Delayed

With this power the President could prevent American ships or citizens from entering German or Italian ports, should those nations go to war with Great Britain and France, critics of the provisions said.

"There was a great deal of concern expressed over the combat area section and there was no unanimity of opinion," Representative Robinson (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the meeting, revealed.

Democratic chieftains postponed House consideration of the Bloom bill from Monday to Tuesday, to allow more time to sound out the membership on the controversial issue.

A preliminary poll disclosed 6 of the 19 Pacific Coast Democrats are opposed to repeal of provisions in the existing neutrality law which forbid exportation of arms, ammunition and implements of war to belligerents. At least four Democrats from New York City took a similar stand.

Tennis, Boating and Swimming Making Greenbelt a Play Spot

Swimming, boating, tennis and picknicking facilities at the Government-built town of Greenbelt, Md., promise to make it a playground for Prince Georges County this summer.

The "model" town, built at a cost of $15,000,000 for families whose income averages about $1,600, boasts a modern, concrete swimming pool and a 23-acre artificial lake on which the town has provided 12 metal rowboats. Four tennis courts and a 33-acre picnic ground are nearby.

The cost to Greenbeltians is very low—10 cents for swimming, 20 cents an hour for boating, 30 cents an hour for tennis and free picknicking with firewood furnished.

Nonresidents are invited to use all facilities except the tennis courts, which may be opened to the general public later if local patronage is insufficient. The "ante" for the general public is 35 cents for swimming, but other privileges cost the same.

O. K. Fulmer, assistant town manager, said on week-ends nonresidents outnumber Greenbelt patrons in the swimming pool and on the picnic grounds. Statistics show that 1,400 nonresident admissions have been paid at the swimming pool since it was opened May 31.

A number of Greenbelt residents, officials said, have canceled their vacation plans because of recreational advantages in the town.

For those residents who like to use their spare time more constructively, the town has provided garden plots for flowers and vegetables. In addition, there are 3,000 acres of woodland outside the town limits, through which trails have been cut for hikers and nature lovers.

Frank Warns Brokers of New Regulations

Sees More Stringent Rules if Customers Are Not Protected

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 23.—In his first speech to a Wall Street group since he became SEC chairman, Jerome Frank warned brokers tonight that unless customers are more fully protected wider Federal regulation will follow.

He said, in an address before the association of customers' brokers, that if ever the middle class of investors comes to believe it is being unfairly treated by its business leaders, "it may fall victim to the disease of dictatorship, of either the Communist or Fascist variety."

The SEC, he said, "has the job of helping to preserve democracy, of preventing dictatorship by depriving potential dictators of one of their most important implement—the anger of mistreated investors."

Frank asserted the SEC still favors establishment of trust institutions or "brokerage banks" in financial centers for safeguarding customers' funds and securities. This function is now performed by brokerage companies themselves.

A central depository system suggested by the exchange, he said, "would not provide complete protection for customers' funds and securities."

To protect the investor, Frank said, "something has to be done. The SEC has no choice as to that."

"As I see it, then, our problem here boils down to simply this: Which does the street prefer? More of SEC in this field—or none at all? Complicated SEC regulations—or none whatever? More Government supervision of brokers—or a total withdrawal—in this large area—of all governmental supervision of brokers' activities. There are no other choices. We cannot, we must not, we dare not offer you any other.

"In other words we offer you this choice: (1) You can have more SEC regulation of brokers' activities—regulation designed to insure customer safety or (2), by the establishment of brokerage banks, you can, as far as this subject of customer protection is concerned, in this particular area, get rid of the SEC and of SEC regulations on that subject."

Weather Bureau Aides Warm To Prospect of Air-Conditioning

Weather in Washington and the rest of the country was only a fragment of the news at the Weather Bureau yesterday.

Into the sultry atmosphere of the building came the report that the Senate, at insistence of Chairman Russell, of the Senate Subcommittee on Agricultural Appropriations, had restored in the agriculture appropriation bill a provision for a new $250,000 building, dropped out earlier by the House.

Francis E. Reichelderfer, chief of the bureau, greeted the news warmly, pointing out that his staff gets up all its reports about heat waves and humidity without benefit of air conditioning.

While the appropriation item is scheduled to go to conference, the bureau staff was encouraged at the idea of some day being able to leave all its hot weather outside.

Along with glancing over the prospects for the new building, Reichelderfer outlined plans for a "streamlined" code for weather reporting, scheduled to go into effect next Saturday.

For nearly half a century weather observers have been sending in messages like "Lander Burnet Medalist Emotions Nutrust Curry Common Iiing." The man who received at the Weather Bureau could tell, with a glance at this message, that in Lander, Wyo., the barometer stood at 30.10 inches, the wind was coming from the south, clouds moving 22 miles an hour, the barometer was rising, then falling, minimum temperature was 58, dewpoint 60 degrees, maximum temperature 70, ceiling 500 to 700 feet, visibility 5 to 7 miles, and other details.

With the new code the same message would read, "57667 16502 19346 60005 40136 76283 5870," with the difference that the numerical fractions in the report would be more exact are details somewhat more comprehensive.

The trouble with the old code, officials said, was that the alphabet didn't have enough vowels. Temperature and barometrical readings could be given only to the nearest even figure. The new code will bring reports down to decimal points, and, in addition, will place the United States Weather Service on a code basis long in use by other nations.

Also in line for development in the near future, Reichelderfer said, is preparation of the daily weather maps upon which forecasts are based at intervals of six instead of 12 hours.

Rare Operation Saves Triplets And Mother

Albion, N. Y., June 23 (AP).—Triplets were born in a rare Caesarean operation to save the life of Mrs. Lloyd Jones, of Lyndonville, N. Y., in Allen Gregory Memorial Hospital today.

The operation, described by a Rochester physician to be as rare "as probably one in half a million," was performed by Dr. William D. Johnson, of Batavia, N. Y.

The triplets, all boys ranging in weight from 3 pounds 4 ounces to 4 pounds 2 ounces, were placed in an incubator. Hospital Superintendent Edith Plant said they were "doing well." The mother was reported recovering.

50 Texas Youths Will Visit Fair On 100-Ft. Leash

Fifty Texas delegates to the Luther League convention, which ends this morning at the University of Maryland, are going on to the New York World's Fair today, but don't intend to get lost in the big city.

The youths, who have sported wide-brimmed sombreros, boots and spurs during the conclave, said last night they would attach a 100-foot rope to themselves, Alpine-climber fashion, when they hit Manhattan. If they get lost, they said, they'll get lost together.

Paris, June 23 (AP). — Tragedy marred the Duke of Windsor's birthday party tonight when a man, unofficially identified as Bedrich Benes, military attache of the Czecho-Slovak Legation in Paris, plunged 186 feet from the first platform of the Eiffel Tower, where the duke and duchess were celebrating.

It was said the man was not related to former President Eduard Benes of Czecho-Slovakia, who now is in the United States.
